WHITE HOUSE CALLS FOR DATA ON REAL BEER

But Explains Order Isn't Hoover's.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 18.—(Special.)—A three hour conference was held at the White House tonight, with President Hoover and Secretaries Stimson, Mellon, and Lamont attending. No information as to the nature of the conference could be obtained, but it was assumed by the few who learned of its meeting that it dealt with the international political, financial, and economic conditions. There were rumors that the conference concerned Great Britain's troubles; others that it was to discuss the Japan-China situation.

The secretaries arrived at the White House at about 8 o'clock this evening, each alone. It was shortly after 11 when they left.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Frequently denied reports that President Hoover is considering modification of the Volstead act to restore real beer were revived today by persistent rumors that the White House had sought and obtained official information on the economic considerations involved.

At the White House, it was disclosed, data from the census bureau dealing figures on the number of persons employed by the breweries and the total amount of wages paid in the industry in the prohibition era.

When this news leaked out there was a hurried conference between the President and Walter Newton, the White House secretary, who had submitted the request for information to the census bureau. Emerging from Mr. Hoover's office, Mr. Newton stated that the information had been sought not for the President but for a prominent person not connected with the White House. Any inference that the President was interested in obtaining the information is wholly unwarranted, Mr. Newton asserted.

The Secretary's Version.

According to Mr. Newton's version of the incident, the request for the data was received and was forwarded to the census bureau as a routine accommodation of the sort that a senator or congressman renders his constituents. The figures were received from the census bureau within the last 24 hours, but had not yet been transmitted to the applicant for the information. The identity of the applicant Mr. Newton declined to reveal. He added that he had not shown the figures to the President.

For weeks there have been persistent rumors that the administration is on the verge of coming out for the resumption of beer of an alcoholic content of 3 or 4 per cent, which the proponents of such an amendment of the Volstead act claim is nonintoxicating in fact, and therefore legal within the 18th amendment.

Given Wide Credence.

These reports have been published, transmitted over the radio and the news ticker and disseminated by the well known grapevine telegraph. Folks yearning for the restoration of beer have been led to believe that where there is so much smoke there must be some fire.

To every inquiry regarding such reports, the White House has stated that they are wholly lacking in foundation. The President has declined to answer questions concerning his attitude, but his secretariat has represented his position to be the same today as when he transmitted the Wickersham commission report to congress last January. On that occasion he agreed with everything in the report except the suggestion that the 18th amendment be replaced with one delegating to congress the power to regulate or prohibit the liquor traffic. The commission went on record against the restoration of beer of low alcoholic content, and with that Mr. Hoover tacitly agreed.

While the President assumed this attitude in his letter transmitting the commission's report to congress, his secretariat energetically spread the assurance that he had not closed his mind hermetically to any modification of the prohibition law. Mr. Hoover, it was explained, merely did not agree with the particular modification suggested by the commission he had appointed to find the facts and make recommendations.

The movement for the restoration of beer has been growing by leaps

STATE AUDITOR IS INDICTED BY WAUKEGAN JURY

Nelson Named in Bank Inquiry.

Indictments charging State Auditor Oscar Nelson with misfeasance and culpable omission of duty in six counts were returned late yesterday afternoon by the special Lake county grand jury investigating the closing of the Waukegan State bank on June 17. At the same time indictments were returned against John Murray Connors and Milton E. Smith, former vice presidents of the bank.

OSCAR NELSON.

Nelson is charged with failure to close the bank last Oct. 24 when, it was charged, he should have had knowledge the bank was insolvent. On that date, according to the indictment, the capital stock of the bank was grossly impaired and the assets were insufficient to meet deposit liabilities Nelson, it was charged, was in a position to know that the bank was being conducted illegally.

Permitted Bank to Reorganize.

The auditor is also charged with failure to order an assessment on stockholders of the bank. Instead of closing the bank he is said to have permitted a reorganization which kept the bank alive for several months. Four counts were drawn on the first allegation and two on the second.

The penalty on conviction in the indictment against Mr. Nelson is removal from office or a fine not to exceed $10,000 or both.

Mr. Nelson was not at his office. He was reported to have left for Springfield. He has repeatedly declared the bank was solvent in his judgment at the time State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county holds it was not sound. Friends of Nelson, including prominent loop bankers not involved in the investigation, have declared the indictment is without legal foundation, as courts have repeatedly held a public official cannot be held liable for errors of judgment when he acts in good faith.

May Ask Venue Change.

Mr. Nelson is expected to ask for a change of venue on his arraignment to avoid trial in Waukegan. It is also expected he will demand an investigation of the bank's books by impartial examiners, probably national bank examiners, to contradict the testimony of the auditors of the grand jury.

Prosecutor Smith made public the names of witnesses who gave testimony on which the indictments were drawn. These included three of the auditor's examiners, J. A. Jaworski, Paul R. Wilkerson and Mark Waggoner. Others were Carl R. Stenger, former chairman of the board of the bank; his son, Richard Stenger, employé of the bank; his brother, Joseph Stenger, cashier of the bank; Edward Durkin, James A. Reaves, and William Wandell, former directors of the bank; Fred B. Whitney, receiver of the bank; William H. Miller, vice president of the former National Bank of the Republic, and Charles Bond and John Macown, auditors for the jury.

Smith Named for Larceny.

Milton E. Smith was named in an indictment charging larceny in fraudulently converting $1,018.16 of the Waukegan bank's money to his own use. Smith is said to have drawn out his account and those of his wife and father after the bank closed at 3 p. m. June 17. Three witnesses testified against him, including a woman clerk, who said she was so annoyed at Smith's taking the money out after she had closed her books that she paid him in one dollar bills. She testified she did not know the bank was closing. Smith, who was a witness before the jury yesterday, said he took the money out before the bank closed.

John Murray Connors was named in two indictments for obtaining money under false pretenses. He is said to have loaned himself $625 on Nov. 24, 1930, without consent of the directors and $9,679.29 on Oct. 17, 1930, also without consent of the directors.

Connors is now receiver for the Citizens' State bank of Klethsburg, Ill. He was arrested on a warrant charging him with making the loans last Sept. 4 and released on bond. Mr. Nelson, in his appearances before the jury, said he gave Connors the appointment because the latter sought him out after the bank's failure and

DR. D. S. JORDAN CRITICALLY ILL; SUFFERS STROKE

Stanford University, Cal., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Dr. David Starr Jordan, 80 year old chancellor emeritus of Stanford university, was believed near death here tonight as the result of a paralytic stroke late today.

It is his fifth stroke, and his condition was characterized by his physician Dr. Russell V. Lee, as critical.

The physician would not say whether he expected the aged educator to survive the night. He said the illness was the most serious since Dr. Jordan first was stricken more than two years ago.

A month ago Dr. Jordan suffered a stroke, but recovered sufficiently to sit in a wheel chair. He was confined to his bed when stricken this afternoon, however.

In addition to suffering from paralysis, caused by hardening of the arteries of the brain, the chancellor emeritus also is afflicted with diabetes and heart disease, Dr. Lee said.

GERMAN RAILWAY LOAN WILL GIVE THOUSANDS JOBS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—Thousands of Germany's unemployed will find work for several months under the new government plan revealed today to issue a railway loan between $50,000,000 and $70,000,000, the proceeds of which will be devoted entirely to the creation of work for the jobless.

The loan will take the form of German railway gold bonds on a fine gold basis and will be exempt from income, property, and inheritance taxes. This is expected to return to Germany the capital which fled abroad. In view of the tax free character of the bonds, they will bear a moderate rate of interest, not to exceed 5 per cent. The flotation will be confined to the home market.

The money will be used primarily for railway renewals. This will assure large contracts for the iron, wood and stone industries. Orders for rolling stock will also be placed so that car shops, now threatened with complete stoppage, can be further maintained.

Yellow Cab Driver Shot to Death in His Taxicab

Martin E. Buckner, 32 years old, 4248 North Spaulding avenue, a Yellow cab driver, was shot to death early this morning in his taxicab at Wood street and Austin avenue. The slaying is supposed to have been done by a robber. Edward S. Houston, a Central Watch Service watchman, heard four shots in the taxicab, which ran nearly two blocks after the shooting before it stopped. Then a man leaped out and fled. Buckner was shot twice through the head.

Jane Addams Asks Gandhi to Visit U. S.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Sept. 18. — Mahatma Gandhi, India's Nationalist leader, is likely to make his long deferred trip to America as soon as the round table conference is over.

The "holy man" has been impressed by a cable just received from Jane Addams of the Hull house, Chicago, and John Dewey, together with a long list of notable signers, begging him to come before he returns to India. He has not yet reached a decision, but a friend in constant touch with hi.. said the prospect is good for a visit late in November or early in December.

A similar invitation reached the mahatma before he sailed for London, but he declined it on two grounds—first, that it might disturb British authorities if he went on the eve of the conference, and, second, that he might be paraded as a stunt before the American people.

Long Cherished the Trip.

The situation has changed in the last few days, however, and Gandhi's friends now feel there is a fair chance of his work at the conference being successful. In the event of his achieving a settlement here, the way will be open for him to cross the Atlantic and make a trip which for years has been one of his most cherished hopes.

The federal structures committee reached the end of its first week's discussion today, leaving an unmistakable impression that the delegates are even more divided than a year ago.

Gandhi's outburst against the slow procedure yesterday had some effect, for Lord Sankey, chairman, announced he would begin preparation of a preliminary report the middle of next week. There will be a few more days of general debate, after which the committee will adjourn for two days so that Lord Sankey can draw up tentative recommendations.

Delegates Unable to Agree.

Lord Sankey's first report will, at least, give the committee something concrete to discuss, but so far there has been little or no unanimity on which he can base his conclusions. Delegates have disagreed on almost every subject except on the desirability of giving India equal status in the empire. But how the proposed new constitution shall work has been a source of endless disagreement.

An example came today when Dr. B. M. Ambedkar, spokesman for the "untouchables," disagreed strongly with Gandhi's proposal for indirect elections. Ambedkar, who, like Gandhi, is a Hindu, insisted the "untouchables" must have electorates and send their own deputies to the new legislature. From the somewhat bitter tone of his speech it was apparent he does not trust Gandhi as a friend of the depressed classes.

MICHIGAN METHODIST CONFERENCE VOTES FOR BIRTH CONTROL

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The Detroit annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church today adopted a resolution indorsing birth control.

The resolution also expressed approval of physical and mental examinations of both parties before marriage, the sterilization of the mentally unfit, and a "proper spiritual preparation" for marriage.

"We believe," the resolution says, "that the family should have only as many children as can be reared to be a real asset to society and that the right of married people following their conscience to limit the size of their families should be recognized, and that knowledge of birth control should be made available by pastor and physician."

Urges a Moratorium.

New York, Sept. 18.—[Special.]—A two year moratorium on babies is proposed today by Mrs. Margaret Sanger, leader of the birth control movement, as the method of meeting the economic depression.

In the face of another winter of heavy unemployment, she says, children should not be brought into the world to complicate the economic problems of their parents and further to burden charitable institutions.

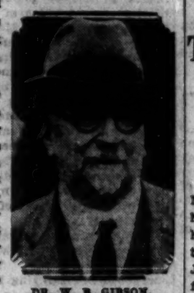
Pick Holes in Mrs. Collings' Death Story

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 18.—[Special.]—A day of intense effort on the part of Long Island authorities to discredit Mrs. Lillian Collings' story of the Penguin murder ended this afternoon in the abrupt and unexpected adjournment of the coroner's inquest into the drowning of Benjamin P. Collings until next Friday morning.



DR. W. B. GIBSON.

The proceedings in Huntington town hall were halted dramatically when District Attorney Alexander Blue of Suffolk county, a flinty-voiced weather beaten man of quick decisions, left the courtroom hurriedly to investigate "new developments vital to the case."

Late tonight, however, the prospects of an immediate solution of the yacht mystery appeared to be slender, indeed the mystery was growing even more complex.

Tears at Wife's Story.

Mr. Blue, who now has jurisdiction of the Collings inquiry, questioned only two witnesses today but he did it in a biting, searching manner, the interrogations pointedly aimed at the veracity of Mrs. Collings. His attitude indicated he was endeavoring to make out a case against the woman who says she saw her husband drowned by "pirates" and who now is declared too ill to appear as a witness.

Every question was formulated from a transcript of the story told to Mr. Blue by Mrs. Collings. The prosecutor held the typewritten pages in his hand and said afterward that the story the woman told Sergt. Robert Forrest, the officer who first questioned Mrs. Collings, differed in many respects from her later versions of the murder, abduction, attempted attack on herself and desertion of the Collings child in Long Island sound.

"Wounded Man" Reappears.

Mr. Blue was especially caustic in his probe into the young's widow's initial version of a third "wounded man," who has since faded out of the picture. He voiced amazement when it was revealed that Mrs. Collings said she actually had seen a "form resembling a wounded man" and again when Sergt. Forrest explained a third person version of the movements of the disabled visitor.

Mrs. Collings' husband had told her, the sergeant said, that the wounded man had been placed in the Penguin's skiff, then covered by the upturned pirates' canoe "so that nobody could see him." The feature of

TROOPS SHELL CHINESE CITY; 70 SOLDIERS DIE

Tokio Cabinet Meets; Rush New Forces.

TOKIO, Sept. 19 (Saturday).—With Mukden, capital of Manchuria, in the hands of Japanese troops after a three hours' bombardment early today and the transfer of the headquarters of the Japanese army in Kwantung province from Dairen to Mukden, the full Japanese cabinet was called early today to a special session at 10 a. m. to consider the critical situation.

According to a dispatch received here from Peiping between 70 and 80 Chinese soldiers were killed in the attack on the city. No figures on the casualties of the battle were made public here.

War Chief Issues Statement.

The Japanese cabinet was called into session at the request of Minister of War General Jiro Minami, who issued the following statement:

"I have not received an official report of the battle, and the attitude of the war department cannot be decided upon until it is received. At present, the problem in Manchuria and Corea has a far reaching effect. It may affect the situation throughout China. We are determined to face it with the utmost prudence."

According to semi-official military advices received here, Mukden fell into the hands of Japanese troops at 4:30 a. m., after a half hour of concentrated shell fire.

Battle in Streets.

When the troops entered the city, street fighting began. Japanese soldiers are reported to have attacked the Chinese military arsenal just within the walls of the city following their entry. The Japanese troops also occupied three Chinese banks—the Bank of Three Eastern Provinces, the Bank of Communications, and a private bank.

The hostilities are said to have started when Chinese troops destroyed the Liuchengkao iron bridge of the South Manchurian railway, which is Japanese property. This bridge is situated between Mukden and Wenkuantun stations. The railroad guards called for reinforcements and when the Japanese troops arrived a lively skirmish ensued. The Chinese were driven into their barracks.

Second City Seized.

Reports of desperate fighting in other parts of Manchuria are reaching Tokio. Japanese troops have occupied Hokutaio and the situation there is also described as "critical." Another clash was reported at Changchun, where 2,000 Chinese troops are stationed.

The occupation of Hokutaio followed a clash between a Japanese detachment and 600 Chinese troops shortly before midnight. The fighting was intense, it is reported. The Chinese forces were reinforced by a fresh detachment of 400 troops, who brought up machine guns. At 1:30 a. m., it is reported, the Japanese succeeding in driving the opposing forces back and taking the city.

One Japanese officer was seriously wounded in the fighting. According to reports, sporadic fighting is continuing today.

Communications Are Cut.

All communications between Mukden and Tientsin, China, have been severed.

Reports from Kwangchengtze state that Chinese troops stationed at that city were disarmed at 2:40 a. m. by Japanese forces, including the first battalion of the 4th regiment of infantry stationed at Changchun and with the cooperation of the first battalion at Nanling.

News that the general staff of the Japanese army in the leased territory of Kwantung had left Port Arthur for Mukden at 3 a. m. to supervise operations was received here in a dispatch from Dairen.

Soon after this announcement, Minister of War Minami called a conference of military leaders. The session was held at 7:30 a. m. A half hour later, Gen. Minami was closeted with Premier Wakatsuki.

Troops on the Move.

Heavy movements of Japanese troops to Mukden are reported. The sixth aviation regiment, stationed at Heijo, Corea, is speeding to the Manchurian capital aboard a special train. Military planes are expected to leave from there at 10 a. m.

According to dispatches from Seoul, Corea, one Japanese division had been ordered to Mukden by military authorities. All Japanese reservists have been mobilized for warfare at Dairen. Japanese railway guards from Fushun, Manchuria, are also reported to be advancing on the Manchurian capital.

The city of Fushun is reported to be quiet, but service on the South Manchuria railway has been entirely suspended.

Chinese Report Their Version.

PEIPING, Sept. 19.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—After a three hour artillery bombardment, Japanese troops today occupied Mukden, Manchuria, according to official dispatches received here by Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, governor of Manchuria.

The dispatches asserted that between 70 and 80 Chinese soldiers were killed in the attack.

A squad of Japanese soldiers appeared north of the Mukden military camp two hours before Friday midnight and opened rifle fire, the Manchurian governor was informed. Shortly thereafter, according to the dispatches, artillery bombardment started and shells fell in the Mukden arsenal from somewhere in the Japanese concession at the rate of about one a minute.

Orders Chinese Not to Resist.

Chang Hsueh-Liang telegraphed orders from Peiping that all Chinese troops at Mukden deposit their arms in depots and make no resistance.

The marshal was informed that Japanese consular authorities at Mukden apparently were powerless to prevent the military from firing.

Latest information reaching Peiping was that the Japanese troops were in complete charge and that shells had started a fire in the military camp.

CAUSES OF CONFLICT

Relations between Japan and China have been the cause of worry among the powers of the world for many years. The basic cause for much of the ill feeling between the two nations is held to be Japan's claims to "special rights" in the territory of its neighbor.

Under these special rights, backed up by treaties, Japan, it is claimed by many, has exploited China to the fullest extent, particularly in Manchuria, until at the present time she practically controls the trade and business of that province. The attempts to destroy portions of the South Manchuria railway, which, according to dispatches from Tokio, were the immediate cause of the present incidents at Mukden, has particularly been a source of conflict, in which Russia also has been involved.

The treaty under which Japan bases her claims to special rights in Manchuria was the Russo-Japanese peace treaty, concluded in 1905 at Portsmouth, N. H., following Japan's victory over Russia. Under this pact Japan took over the lease of Kwantung province and the management of the South Manchuria railways, which were then possessed by Russia. By this lease, Japan exercises administration over the leased territory and the South Manchuria railway area. This treaty also recognized the "predominant political, military and economic interests" of Japan in Corea.

Japanese investments in Manchuria at the present time are estimated at about $750,000,000. The population of the Japanese controlled territory is about 1,264,000, of which about 208,000 are Japanese, 48,000 Corean and 1,000,000 Chinese.

Japan Demands Greater Rights.

In 1915 Japan presented her famous 21 demands on China, in which, among other things, she insisted on the greatest leeway in exploiting Manchuria and Mongolia. Some of these demands were reduced in the course of subsequent negotiations, but in treaties, signed on May 25, 1915, the following terms relating to South Manchuria were included:

The term of the lease of Port Arthur and Talienwan and the terms of the South Manchurian and Antung railway concessions were extended to 99 years from the original date of the lease. Under this agreement term of the lease of Kwantung will expire in 1997 and the railways will remain under Japanese control until 2002 and 2007, respectively.

Privileged to Free Trade.

Japanese subjects were privileged to lease land and to trade throughout South Manchuria.

Mining areas in South Manchuria were allotted to Japanese enterprise.

A preference was given to Japanese capital if required for railways in South Manchuria, or if loans were made on the security of the local taxes.

If foreign advisers or instructors on political, financial, military or police matters were to be employed in South Manchuria, Japanese were to be employed first.

Controls Small Area.

The Kwantung leased territory is 1,337 square miles in area, while the South Manchuria railway zone is a narrow strip of land, 700 miles in length, along the railways, and covering 101 square miles. The district under Japanese jurisdiction, thus, is very small in area, but forms the "central line" of South Manchuria, furnishing a valuable link in European far eastern travel.

Since the conclusion of the treaties of 1915, China has repeatedly declared in official statements that they are the greatest obstacle in the way of cordial and friendly relations between Japan and China. She bases this contention on the allegation that the agreements are in violation of the treaties between China and the other powers, and that they are inconsistent with the principles relating to China which were adopted by the Washington conference.

Chinese Charge Aggression.

Furthermore, the Chinese allege, the Japanese are taking advantage of the treaties to further their own selfish ends. The present Chinese boycott of Japanese goods is held to be mainly due to Japanese aggression. The Chinese charge that while protection for Chinese merchants in the Japanese empire is entirely absent, Japanese military agents in China are openly engaged in exhibiting new forms of aggression, including forcible seizures of goods.

The Japanese, on the other hand, deny any selfish aims in their development of Manchuria. There is no question of conquest, nor even of colonization on a large scale, they declare.

Japan's interest and ambition in Manchuria, it is declared, is due solely to the fact that she must make money to pay for the foodstuffs which she must import to feed her rapidly increasing population.

How Present Trouble Started.

The present trouble in Manchuria began to manifest itself openly last July, when a serious clash occurred between Chinese and Corean farmers near Changchun as a result of a dispute over a Japanese irrigation and colonization enterprise. The Chinese charged that Japanese troops, armed with machine guns, drove the Chinese farmers out of the district.

This trouble spread to Corea, and numerous clashes followed, in which hundreds of Chinese are reported to have been killed by Japanese troops.

Japanese Is Executed.

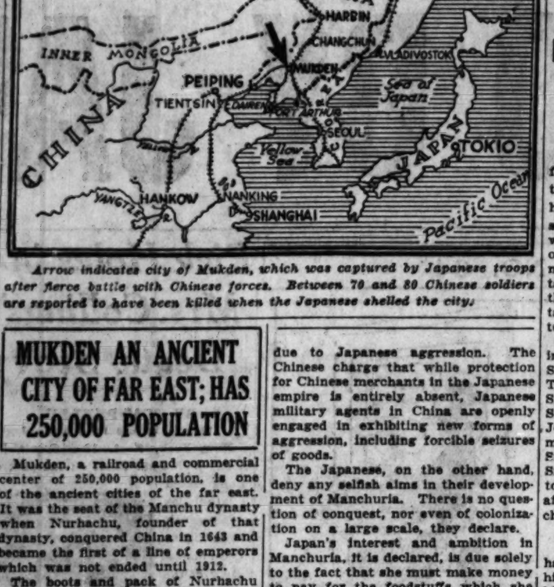
These clashes have continued throughout the summer, and early this month the situation was aggravated by the execution by a Chinese firing squad of Capt. Shintaro Nakamura, a Japanese, another Japanese, a Mongol, and a Russian as spies. The Japanese government demanded an immediate explanation, pointing out that the party held certificates from Chinese officials permitting them to make maps in Manchuria and Mongolia.

This explanation was made yesterday, when Gen. Jung Chun, chief of staff of the Manchurian army, informed the Japanese consul at Mukden that investigation had established that the four were shot by troops commanded by Gen. Kwan Yu-Heng. He said fifty cavalrymen had been sent to arest Gen. Kwan and eleven of his soldiers and to bring them to Mukden. It is expected they will be executed.

Last War in 1894.

The last war between China and Japan was in 1894-'95, and resulted in a crushing defeat for China. The cause of this conflict was China's claim to suzerainty in Corea and denial of Japan's equal interest there. China sent troops to crush an insurrection in Corea and Japan, protesting that Corea was independent, also sent troops. Declarations of war by both sides followed.

JAPAN SEIZES MANCHURIAN CAPITAL



Arrow indicates city of Mukden, which was captured by Japanese troops after fierce battle with Chinese forces. Between 70 and 80 Chinese soldiers are reported to have been killed when the Japanese shelled the city.

MUKDEN AN ANCIENT CITY OF FAR EAST; HAS 250,000 POPULATION

Mukden, a railroad and commercial center of 250,000 population, is one of the ancient cities of the far east. It was the seat of the Manchu dynasty when Nurhachu, founder of that dynasty, conquered China in 1643 and became the first of a line of emperors which was not ended until 1912.

The boots and pack of Nurhachu are preserved in Mukden, while outside the city's walls are the tombs of other Manchu emperors. Within the walls are the old Manchu palace and other ancient buildings from the days of that regime, making it one of the greatest points of historical interest in Manchuria.

Mukden was the scene of one of the most important battles of the Russo-Japanese war. The Japanese succeeded in occupying it after nearly a month of fighting in March, 1905. The city is surrounded by a brick wall 25 feet high. The capital is built in three sections, known as the Chinese walled city, the Japanese railway town, and the international settlement. It does considerable trading in furs and agricultural products.

DROPS NOTE OUT OF SANITARIUM; GETS COURT WRIT

Patient Accuses Wife in Appeal for Freedom.

A laboriously written note, dropped from a window of the private sanitarium at 2736 Hampden court, caused habeas corpus proceedings to be instituted yesterday for the second time within six weeks to obtain the freedom of Hugo Smith, well to do business man, who is a patient in the sanitarium. Smith, a paralytic, who wrote the note appealing for help, will be taken before Judge Harry B. Miller today in the Superior court.

On Aug. 9 habeas corpus proceedings were instituted in his behalf by Shannon Smith, a former employé. The charge was made that Hugo Smith's estranged wife, Mrs. Alice K. Smith, 2000 Lincoln Park West, and John Dempsey, her partner in the magazine distributing business which Smith formerly owned, had kidnaped Smith and were trying to railroad him to an insane asylum. He was freed after being declared sane at the psychopathic hospital.

Note Attached to Petition.

Smith's note, attached to the new habeas corpus petition, charges that his wife obtained custody of him after his release and placed him in the sanitarium on Hampden court operated by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Peele. Smith also charges that his wife had beaten him, a charge made in the former proceedings.

The note was found in an alley behind the sanitarium by two boys. They turned it over to a man whom they met on the street, and he forwarded it to the Taxpayers and Voters league of Illinois, operated by Mrs. Helen E. Joseph. She started the habeas corpus action to be heard today.

Mrs. Joseph, through her league, has appeared at various times within the last two years as an opponent of rodeos and vaccination and as the proponent of reforms at the dog pound and in insane asylums. Her only interest in the Smith case, she said, was to "see justice done."

Deny He Is Imprisoned.

Smith has not been held a prisoner in their place, Mr. and Mrs. Peele said. One of them accompanies whenever he goes for a walk since his paralytic condition makes it impossible for him to speak more than a few words, they said. By a series of questions, to which he mumbled "Yes" or "No," Smith confirmed their statement yesterday that he was not strictly a prisoner, but repeated the charge that his wife had struck him.

Fire Drives Fifty from American Can Co. Plant

Damage estimated at $20,000 was caused late yesterday afternoon by a rapidly spreading fire which forced fifty employés, many of them women, to flee from the can jacketing plant of the American Can company at 9th avenue and St. Charles road, Maywood. The fire started when sparks from a lacquering machine ignited stacks of cardboard boxes on the first floor. The Maywood fire department battled for more than an hour before bringing the blaze under control.

HEIRESS JAILED FOR TEN DAYS IN CONTEMPT CASE

Called Judge a Criminal After Decision.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 19.—[Special.]—Bertha A. Stott, heiress to the Stott flour mills millions, today entered the county jail to serve a ten day sentence for contempt imposed by Judge Homer Ferguson of the Circuit court. She also was ordered to pay a fine of $250.

Miss Stott surrendered in court today with her brother, David, and her attorney, Henry Walters. She was charged with contempt for calling Judge Ferguson "a greater criminal than any person who ever stood before your bar" when he rendered a decision adverse to her in a civil suit.

Faces Judge Impassively.

Miss Stott faced the judge impassively. After the judge had left the bench, she was approached by Max Goodman, chief clerk in the sheriff's office, who was to take her to jail.

"No, I'm not going." Miss Stott cried out when Goodman took her arm. "I haven't done anything. I only spoke the truth."

Goodman was aided by David Stott in calming the woman and she left peacefully, followed by a throng of attorneys and other spectators who had assembled in the courtroom.

Would Preserve Dignity.

"Your personal opinion of me as a judge does not matter," Judge Ferguson said in imposing sentence. "Your opinion of the judicial system I represent does matter. It is essential that respect for the bench and the dignity of the court be preserved."

Chicago Suburbs Offered Cut of 2% in Domestic Gas Rate

The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, supplying gas to the metropolitan area outside Chicago, yesterday filed with the Illinois commerce commission a new schedule of gas rates which it proposes to put into effect when the commission permits it to mix natural gas piped from Texas with the manufactured product.

According to an announcement from the company's general offices, the new rates will bring a reduction in the cost of gas for domestic purposes of about 2 per cent. Gas for residential heating and commercial space heating will be reduced approximately 20 per cent, according to the company. The total saving to gas users served by the company will amount to more than $300,000 a year, the announcement said.

The company stated that it is prepared to put the new rates into effect immediately upon the approval of the commission.

The Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, which supplies gas to Chicago consumers, has already filed a proposed schedule of new rates which calls for a reduction of 3½ per cent in the price of gas for domestic purposes and a 22 per cent reduction in gas for heating purposes.

Asked for an explanation concerning the smaller amount of reduction offered by the Public Service company, an official said that the 2 per cent reduction was the maximum that could be offered. He said that the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company supplies a city of 4,000,000 people, while the 250,000 suburban customers are scattered over a large area, causing greater expense in supplying the gas.

The Peoples Gas company yesterday presented evidence to the commission to show the natural gas requirements and their costs for the years 1932 and 1933. The evidence was offered in support of the company's proposed rates. Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph F. Grossman, representing the city, obtained a continuance of the hearing to Sept. 25 in order to study the testimony presented by the gas company witnesses.

The Peoples company said that it proposes to earn $9,029,313 or a 6½ per cent return on investment in 1933 from the sale of the mixed gas under the proposed new rates.

BROKER, SOUGHT AS EMBEZZLER, KILLS HIMSELF

Sam A. Livingston, 32 years old, secretary-treasurer o fthe Liberty Securities company of Bloomington, Ill., killed himself by inhaling gas yesterday in his room at the McCormick hotel, 616 Rush street.

Dispatches from Bloomington last night said that files of the securities company were being examined by State's Attorney Joseph H. Depew. Livingston had been sought on warrants charging him with embezzlement and obtaining money under false pretenses. Cleon F. Skilliman, president of the company, has been arrested in Bloomington and is in jail in default of $10,000 bonds.

Both men were alleged to have duplicated bonds and mortgages sold to customers of their concern. The number of customers on the books exceeded 250.

POLICE KEEP 82 RESORTS CLOSED ON CERMAK ORDER

Mayor to Bolster Force for Winter Months.

Most of the 82 vice resorts ordered closed by Mayor Cermak Thursday night were darkened last night as squads in the various districts, stimulated to action by the mayor's threat of wholesale suspensions, visited the places named on the mayor's list.

"I think the police force is awakened at last to the fact that I mean business," said the mayor. "These raids should have been made four months ago except that the cappers did not take the cleanup orders seriously."

CAPT. JOHN STEGE.

Asked if he intended issuing more orders directly concerning the police department, the mayor declared he intended to let Acting Commissioner Allman "run the department for a while."

Will Strengthen Department.

One hundred and fifty vacancies in the police department will be filled before winter sets in, the mayor asserted. Since he came into office deaths and discharges have brought a total of vacancies to this number. Despite the need for economy, the police department must be at full strength in the cold winter months, the mayor said.

Continuing his efforts to rid the police force of policy games, Capt. John Stege, recently transferred to the Wabansia avenue station, raided a policy writing plant at 4539 Vincennes avenue and destroyed a printing press which he found there. A still was found in the basement of the building. Seven operators of the policy games were arrested during the day but most of them were released when they promised not to sell the gambling slips in the future. Four men were held.

When several alleged gamblers were arraigned before Judge Matthew D. Mullen he criticized Capt. Martin Foley, head of the mayor's vice squad, for the manner in which the raids had been made. The gamblers were released because the police had failed to obtain warrants to enter the gambling places.

Must Have Warrants.

"Capt. Mullen should know that he has no right to enter places without warrants," the judge said. "If he needs any legal advice on the correct procedure to conduct these raids, he can come to me and I will go hand in hand with him in the matter of issuing warrants. But raids made without search warrants will not stand up in court."

Mayor Cermak was indignant when he heard of Judge Hartigan's remarks: "In these courts," he said, "we are getting convictions of this sort, and I am amazed when I note some of the judges who are standing on mere technicalities and thereby aiding the men we are trying to put out of action. Such technicalities certainly are not raised for the benefit of the community."

May Ask Legal Inquiry.

"I am considering asking Corporation Counsel Sexton to go thoroughly into the subject of the necessity for police warrants where the police know beyond a doubt that the law is being violated and where their raids produce evidence of that violation. If necessary we may go to the Supreme court for a new construction on this phase of the law. Judge Hartigan's remarks remind me of the way some judges issue injunctions to protect violators of the law."

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus for George [Red] Barker, gunman with a long record, was dismissed yesterday after Judge Rudolph Seyfert of the Criminal court had ordered that Barker be booked or released. Barker was booked for carrying concealed weapons and released on $10,000 bond. He was arrested Thursday night on the south side and threw a revolver away when police seized him.

Ted Stanger and William Evans, charged with Barker, were identified by the detective bureau as being two of the five men who robbed the Banco di Napoli, 908 South Halsted street, Sept. 11, and escaped with $18,000.

British Teachers Strike Because of Pay Cut

Mass demonstration in which 3,000 London school teachers took part to protest against 15 per cent reduction in pay proposed in new national government economy program. The demonstration shown was followed yesterday by a strike of the teachers, who pledged themselves to no overtime work. [Acme Photo.]

SCHOOLTEACHERS "STRIKE" OVER BRITISH PAY CUT

Will Do Duty, but No Overtime.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 18.—First the navy, then the school teachers. The teachers in one section of London announced today that while they will not refuse to do their duty because of salary cuts, they will not do anything but "strict duty" and will cease all extra activities after hours. These activities are chiefly in connection with the organization of sports, which previously has been undertaken by the teachers voluntarily.

This decision will immediately affect about 7,000 children in the poorest quarters of the city. Teachers took the initiative and notified the parents this morning. The movement is expected to spread all over London and the country.

Ashamed of Themselves.

The teachers state they are frankly ashamed of themselves, but argue that they have no other recourse. Organization of sports takes money as well as time, and the salary cuts leave no margin for philanthropic luxuries, they state.

Meanwhile naval port commanders are preparing for Monday's hearings at the principal fleet bases into the pay cut grievances of sailors, whose "passive mutiny" interrupted fleet maneuvers.

Desperate efforts are being made by bankers and business men to persuade the emergency national government against an early general election for which the young back-bench Tories in parliament are pressing, and of which, it seemed for a time, they had obtained a promise.

Emergency Far from Over.

The bankers, however, have told the government that the emergency is far from over, even with the balancing of the budget, and that if the country were to be plunged into the excitement and uncertainty of an election at this time they would not be responsible for the stability of the pound sterling.

The Liberal party today declared definitely against an election. The Conservative leader, Stanley Baldwin, and Neville Chamberlain, party organizer, oppose an election but they are under severe pressure from followers who believe they have a chance to snatch a victory on the protection tariff issue and thereby get rid of Prime Minister MacDonald, Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer; J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions, and those Liberals who are occupying offices in the new government.

Some party leaders, it is learned, are willing to go to the country as part of a national party which would retain Mr. MacDonald as leader and embody the best of all three existing parties into a government. Such a combination, it is believed, would be irresistible to the British voter.

Suggest Premier Become Viceroy.

There is still another faction which would continue the present government without an election, but would have Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Snowden retire. This program provides a seat for Mr. Snowden in the house of lords and would make Mr. MacDonald, after handing over the premiership to Mr. Baldwin, either viceroy of India or ambassador to Washington.

The government tonight received a majority of 64 votes in the house of commons on its proposal to reform the dole for the unemployed.

British Tars Go Ashore.

SHEERNESS, England, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The cruiser York and some of the destroyers of the Atlantic fleet arrived here tonight from Invergordon, Scotland, scene of the bluejacket "strike" against pay cuts. A number of men came ashore and they all were in a jovial mood. Week-end leave will be granted tomorrow as usual.

FORD'S NO GARDEN, NO JOB EDICT TO HIS MEN STIRS FARMERS

Baraga, Mich., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Farmers throughout the upper peninsula today raised a storm of protest over Henry Ford's recent "no gardens, no jobs" edict to employés. Its enforcement, they claim, would impoverish them.

Baraga Grange, leading in the protest, passed a resolution against the attitude taken by the Ford Motor company and will send a copy to every subordinate grange in Michigan, as well as the state grange. The resolution urges that means be taken to have Ford's order rescinded or modified.

The farmers hold the Ford order to force his married employés to plant gardens to hold their jobs is "un-American and contrary to the spirit of American institutions."

DRY AGENTS RAID BIG BREWERY ON N. CLARK STREET

One of the largest "wildcat" breweries ever found in the Chicago territory was raided early this morning by federal agents at 4866 North Clark street. The brewery was equipped with the most modern beer making machinery and an immense quantity of finished beer and beer in the making was destroyed.

Eleven tanks of mash, each containing 5,000 gallons; three tanks of finished beer, also each containing 5,000 gallons, and fifty barrels of beer ready for delivery were wrecked. The machinery in the place was smashed with sledge hammers. The raid was led by Prohibition Administrator J. F. J. Herbert and Deputy A. Hamilton.

MICHIGAN AVE. TO BE RAISED AT RANDOLPH TODAY

A battalion of workmen equipped with excavating and paving machines will descend on Michigan avenue at Randolph street this morning to start a rapid fire job of raising the level of the street to meet that of the new Randolph street viaduct across the Illinois Central tracks.

The boulevard will be closed to traffic after the noon rush has passed, and will probably be open only for one way traffic during the morning, it was said by D. J. Brumley, engineer of the Illinois Central railroad in charge of the operation. North bound traffic will be routed west at Washington street to Garland court, north to Lake street and back to the boulevard. South bound traffic will proceed from the link bridge west on Wacker drive to Wabash, State, and Dearborn streets.

The pavement will be torn up and relaid on the boulevard for approximately 100 feet north and south of Randolph street and for a short distance west on the latter thoroughfare. Use of a quick hardening concrete will enable the engineers to finish the job and open the new pavement to traffic Monday morning, they expect.

The viaduct itself, however, will not be completed until connection is made next year with the new outer link bridge at the mouth of the river.

STEGE GRANTS AN INTERVIEW TO POLICY KING

Trap Lewis, colored, has long been known as the policy king of the Wabash avenue police district. On Thursday evening Capt. John Stege, newly appointed commander of the district, raided Lewis' lottery headquarters at 5525 South Wabash avenue and 319 East 55th street.

Lewis promised that his business would be moved out of the district, so Capt. Stege and his raiders allowed him his freedom, although they seized all his paraphernalia.

Late yesterday afternoon, however, Lewis drove up to the Wabash avenue station in a sixteen cylinder automobile. Scattered around on his shirt front and fingers were a little less than a gill of diamonds. He announced he wished to see Capt. Stege. The captain sent him word that he didn't want to see him.

"But I insist," said Lewis. "I must see him now or a little later."

"O, all right," replied Capt. Stege to his secretary. "I'll see him, but not till next Tuesday. While he's waiting lock him up in a cell."

BULLETIN.

NANKING, China, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here at 2:36 p. m. today (1:36 a. m. Chicago time) after a flight of 800 miles from Fukuoka, Japan.

FUKUOKA, Japan, Sept. 19.—(AP)—[Saturday.]—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off at 8:35 a. m. today (6:53 p. m. Friday, Chicago daylight time) on a flight of nearly 800 miles across the Yellow sea to Nanking, China. The colonel estimated the flight would require about seven hours.

The departure marked the end of their visit to Japan. Beyond Nanking their route was uncertain. Col. Lindbergh has said, however, that he and his wife intend to fly to Europe before terminating their aerial vacation. Whether they would fly via Siberia or southward through India was yet to be settled.

Ocean Flyers Get Permit Today.

TOKIO, Sept. 18.—The aviation bureau expects to issue a permit tomorrow for Hugh Herndon Jr. and Clyde Pangborn, American aviators, to begin a flight to the United States from Japanese territory.

Herndon and Pangborn, who flew across the Atlantic ocean, Europe and Asia this summer, were fined $1,025 each after reaching Tokio because they took motion pictures of Japanese fortifications. They since had been awaiting a permit, the delay running more than a month.

The pair propose to fly to Samishuro Beach soon and strike out over the Pacific for Seattle on Sept. 27.

Nome Goal of Pacific Flyers.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Don Moyle and C. A. Allen who were forced down on an uninhabited island in Bering sea on their projected nonstop flight from Japan to Seattle, planned to take to the air again today for a 600 mile flight to Nome, Alaska.

Their course will take them across Bering sea to Nome from Miano Pilgina, Siberian coast village southwest of Cape Navarin, where they were landed by the Soviet vessel that rescued them from the bleak island. The flight was expected to take about six hours.

The St. Paul Island naval radio station in Bering sea received messages from the Russian steamship Buriat saying the plane had been removed intact to Miano Pilgina at the time of rescue. The plane was refueled from a gasoline supply on the Buriat.

GOLD STAR MOTHERS HOME FROM FRANCE; NINE FROM ILLINOIS

New York, Sept. 18.—[Special.]—The United States liner George Washington arrived in port this morning carrying 118 gold star mothers, the last contingent to make the trip to the battlefields of France as guests of the United States government. Among the group were the following gold star mothers from Illinois:

In addition to the usual tour of France this group had the added privilege of a trip to London. They visited the Brookwood cemetery, where the sons of most of them were buried.

An attempt by Michael Carrozza, head of several unions composed of city laborers, to elect one of his men as president of the $17,000,000 Municipal Employés Annuity and Benefit fund was reported yesterday in the city hall. Balloting by the 14,000 civil service employés who are contributors to the fund will take place in the election commissioners' office today between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

The other candidates are Arthur W. James, the incumbent, who is seeking to succeed himself, and James E. O'Kane. Mr. James is head of the labor division of the civil service commissioner's office, and has served for six years as a trustee of the fund.

STATE TEARS AT WIFE'S STORY OF COLLINGS' DEATH

Prosecutor Suddenly Halts Inquest.

the reversible canoe also appeared to perplex the young officer, who scratched his head and remarked, "It seemed sort of hazy to me, but I just let it go along."

The district attorney brought out the statement that at no time had Mrs. Collings told Sergt. Forrest of a struggle on the Penguin nor of an attack or mistreatment of any kind from either of the bandits, nor had she shown the expected reactions of a woman tragically separated from husband and child.

The question, "How did she greet you?" was asked three times. Each time Forrest replied that Mrs. Collings "smiled when she saw me coming," and "appeared clear eyed, calm and collected."

"Did Mrs. Collings ever say her husband had been killed?" was another pointed question.

"She never did," replied the witness. Mr. Blue smiled at his corps of assistants and the tiny, crowded court room buzzed.

"What did she tell you about the blankets in the Bo-Peep, the motor boat in which she was found?" asked Blue.

"She said she did not know anything about where they came from," answered the witness. [Mrs. Collings in her story to the prosecutor said the elder of the bandits gave the blankets to her to keep her warm after an attempted indignity.]

Sergeant Skeptic, Too.

The prosecutor dramatized and emphasized the omissions and inconsistencies in the widow's account of the tragedy on the Penguin and Sergt. Forrest indicated clearly that he was as skeptical of the story he was telling at second hand as was Mr. Blue.

Sergt. Forrest and Amza Biggs Jr., the constable who found Collings' body on the beach of the Marshall Field estate last Wednesday, were the only witnesses questioned today.

Mr. Blue had finished with Forrest and Coroner William B. Gibson, a little gray man with a ragged mustache and white goatee, was clearing up as best he could certain of the more obscure points, when a detective entered the courtrom and whispered to Mr. Blue. The prosecutor immediately asked for an adjournment and afterward told reporters he had received information which might lead to the immediate arrest of two men involved in the murder.

Lifeguard Offers Tip.

It was soon learned the tip came from Blue's brother-in-law, Fred Meyer, a lifeguard at Northport, a neighboring village. Meyer was quoted as having said he knew the names of the slayers and the motive—jealousy. The truth of the statment had not been established late tonight, although Blue had expressed doubts that it would stand up after preliminary investigation.

A second tip led to Duck island, the summer estate of Minor D. Crary, whose canoe, stolen by unknown persons on the day before Collings was killed, turned up several days ago adrift in the sound. Blue had been told two men corresponding to the description of the "pirates" were on the island. Late tonight he said this tip had been unproductive.

Collings Family Hits Back.

While Mrs. Collings' story was being picked to pieces in Huntington town hall it was being vigorously defended in Stamford by her attorneys. At the same time it was learned that the Collings family had hired private detectives to cope with the private sleuths—one of Hall-Mills fame—commissioned by the Long Island authorities to aid in the investigation.

Homer S. Cummings of the Collings counsel said Mrs. Collings was prevented from attending the inquest only by her physical inability to make the journey across the sound. Mrs. Collings' failure to carry on or resist the invaders was "God given wisdom," in the opinion of Mr. Cummings.

Biggs First Witness.

Young Biggs, the constable, was on the witness stand only a short time. He merely testified to finding Collings' body.

Forrest's story was important, as it was the first official account of the crime told publicly. Forrest is the "one man police force" of Cove's Neck. He was called to the beach by a watchman who told him, "There is a woman who is either drunk or crazy out here in a boat."

Sergt. Forrest said he found Mrs. Collings clad in a white dress, wearing men's sneakers on her stockingless feet. She was sitting dry-eyed beside a boathouse.

"When I first approached her," said the officer in his direct narrative, "she greeted me with a smile. Later, when she was telling me of the loss of her husband, there was a slight quiver in her voice, but for the most part she was calm and collected. When she spoke to me she looked me in the eye. Occasionally she looked out over the water. Sometimes she gave a sign of nervousness and would put her hand to her forehead."

It was revealed in Forrest's story that Mrs. Collings saw the lights of a passing boat twice during the tragic night. The first time was when the "pirates" ordered the Penguin to stop and remain quiet while a scow passed in the middle of the sound and the second time was just as she stepped into the intruders' canoe.

The old man and the boy had told her to make no outcry, her husband had given her the same advice, so she kept quiet, she told Forrest. The officer was sure Mrs. Collings had shown no grave concern over the safety of her 5 year old daughter, Barbara, and had insisted on telephoning home before the sergeant broadcast an alarm to the coast guard boats to watch out for the derelict Penguin.

The fact that Mrs. Collings actually saw her husband in the water but did not say he was drowning was brought out in Sergt. Forrest's story. Forrest said he asked her if she saw her husband after she got into the canoe with the "pirates."

Saw Him Floating.

He said she replied:

"Yes, he was in the water, off the bow. We traveled a while and I saw a green light coming and then it turned red. I think it was a boat that was to meet the canoe I was in, but it did not stop."

"Had she been weeping when you saw her?" the witness was asked.

"No," he replied, "her eyes did not show it."

"Did she say anything about either of the men trying to kiss her?"

"No, she didn't."

Another development was the report that Harlan P. Chelius, father of Mrs. Lillian Collings, was somewhat of a mystery man himself. Chelius, it was said, registered at Adrian house, Block Island, on Aug. 1, giving his home address as Daytona, Fla., when he lived in Boston. A case of similar names is possible, but no explanation has been offered by the family.

Mr. Chelius, it was said, left Block Island for an unrevealed destination Sept. 3. The Penguin had anchored in the vicinity during the time Mr. Chelius was at Block Island, but there were no visits made between Chelius and the Collings. The day after Collings vanished Mr. Chelius was located in New London, Conn., and went to Stamford at once.

JUDGE RESIGNS AFTER A CRASH AND KILLS SELF

Drinking, Policemen Said After Accident.

Lancaster, N. H., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Judge Eric Oakes of the New Hampshire Superior court committed suicide today a few hours after the consequences of a wild automobile ride, had led him to resign from the bench. He was 42 years old.

In the quiet of his family home, Judge Oakes said farewell to his daughter as she left for school, penned two notes and telephoned a friend to visit him. The friend was Dr. William H. Leith, acting for the day as a medical referee.

Finds Judge Dead.

Dr. Leith went to the Oakes home as a friend, but once inside he assumed the duties of medical referee for he found the judge dead in bed. He had been shot through the head and a pistol lay by his side.

The shooting took place at about the time Gov. John G. Winant was writing to Oakes to accept his resignation and tell him he respected him for his desire to show special privilege to no man.

Last Sunday night an automobile driven by the judge struck a pole in the town of Milton. Policemen said they found the judge under the influence of liquor. They did not know him and took him to the police station, where he put up a fight before he was subdued, they said. A county official later recognized the judge, and he was released. No charge was placed against him.

Mistrial Is Declared.

Yesterday the state registrar of motor vehicles announced he had suspended the judge's right to operate a motor vehicle "for good and sufficient reasons." Later an assistant attorney general was assigned to investigate the case. He went to Dover where Judge Oakes was hearing the case of an alleged hit and run driver. After a conference, the judge declared a mistrial in the case and returned to his home here.

CERMAK SENDS CONVENTION PLEA TO 200 MAYORS

Basing his appeal on nonpartisan grounds, Mayor Cermak yesterday sent letters to 200 American mayors of cities of more than 50,000 population urging that both the Republican and Democratic conventions next year be held in Chicago.

"Our strategic location, accessibility, transportation, hotels, adequate convention hall and other natural advantages," he wrote, "attracted some 350 conventions last year. This is evidence of our ability to serve and properly care for those organizations that select our city for their sessions.

"Chicago's facilities promise economy in time and money to every delegate."

AGED PEDESTRIAN KILLED BY AUTO; TOLL IS NOW 871

Three automobile fatalities in Cook county yesterday raised the toll since Jan. 1 to 871.

Isadore Rossfelt, 16 years old, 1321 West Roosevelt road, was fatally injured when the automobile he was driving collided with a machine driven by Richard Basilu, 22, of 1514 Taylor street, at Edgemont and Loomis streets. Rossfelt died at the county hospital.

John Szurge, 70 years old, of Evergreen road, Niles, died early this morning at the Belmont hospital of injuries suffered yesterday when he was struck by an automobile in Niles.

William Budonis, 30 years old, 1440 Adams street, Gary, was killed last night when the automobile in which he was riding with Jose Salazer, 1085 Adams street, collided with another at 15th avenue and Jennings street in Gary. Mrs. Florence Depey, 1985 Washington street, Gary, and Salazar, neither of whom was hurt, were held by the police.

The automobile of a hit-and-run motorist yesterday probably fatally injured Peter Schlitz, 61 years old, 6336 North Springfield avenue, at Chicago and Crawford avenues. A passing motorist took the injured man to the county hospital.

WHITE HOUSE CALLS FOR DATA ON REAL BEER

But Explains Request Is Not Hoover's.

and bounds for several months. The White House has been literally inundated with appeals by strong organizations and highly placed individuals, including many close friends of Mr. Hoover, for a presidential indorsement of the project to lift the ban sufficiently to allow the brewing of 3 or 4 per cent beer.

Labor Leads the Fight.

The greatest impetus was given the movement by the American Federation of Labor, which has launched a determined drive for the requisite legislation by congress. Relying on demonstrations in the past of the ability of the federation to drive labor legislation through congress, Matthew Woll who is directing the fight for beer, predicts favorable action at the coming session.

More than half the members of the President's cabinet are understood to favor the restoration of beer and many of the closest advisers of Mr. Hoover in and out of public life are said to have labored with him at length on the subject. The dry leaders are fully aware of what is going on and have given the President to understand that if he yields to the clamor for beer he will do so at his political peril.

As the economic depression has dragged on, the appeals for the restoration of beer have stressed particularly the argument that such action would lessen unemployment tremendously and promote the return of prosperity.

The Census Figures.

The figures transmitted to the White House by the census bureau showed that in 1914 there were about 75,000 persons employed by breweries of whom 62,000 were wage earners. In 1919, just before prohibition went into effect, there were 42,000, of whom 34,000 were wage earners. The decline was due to wartime regulation on brewing and the spread of state prohibition. In 1929 near beer breweries employed 6,400 persons, of whom 5,000 were wage earners. In 1914 the total compensation of employés was 80 million dollars, in 1919, 68 millions, and in 1929, twelve millions. The value of the products was 442 millions in 1914; 379 million in 1919, and 44 millions in 1929.

Representative L. C. Dyer [Rep., Mo.] recently made an extended argument to Mr. Hoover for the restoration of beer. He estimated that 100,000 persons directly and thousands more indirectly would be given employment and that not less than one billion dollars could be collected by the federal, state and local governments in excise taxes. Of this amount he estimated 250 millions would be collected by the federal government.

Legion Gathering in Detroit for Its Convention Monday

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 19.—[Special.] Legion's mighty host began its entry into Detroit today, and from now on until late Sunday the march to the city will be a steady one.

RALPH T. O'NEIL.

Although the convention does not open until Monday thousands of delegates from every corner of the globe will be here tonight, and the blue and gold official uniform of the Legion already was a common sight in the streets.

With the arrival of National Commander Ralph T. O'Neil of Topeka, Kas., headquarters has been established at the Statler hotel.

National Officers Arrive.

Other national officers arrived today, including John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the national legislative committee; Watson B. Miller, chairman of the national rehabilitation committee, and Robert A. Adams, acting national judge advocate.

Most of the early arriving delegations came ahead of time for specific reasons. Georgia, for instance, came in Thursday and at once launched a campaign to elect Edgar B. Dunlap, Gainesville attorney, national commander.

Illinois headquarters were established in the Hotel Detroiter and a determined group at once went to work to line up sentiment in favor of awarding the 1933 convention to Chicago in conjunction with the World's Fair there that year.

2 Outstanding Candidates.

Most of the preconvention talk among the early arrivals here is on the national commandership. There are the eight outstanding candidates: Edgar B. Dunlap, of Georgia; Emmett O'Neal, state commander of Kentucky; John Eiden of Cleveland; Louis A. Johnson of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Henry S. Stevens of North Carolina; George W. Malone of Reno, Nev.; Rice W. Means of Colorado, and J. Ray Murphy of Iowa.

Chief among questions to come before the convention will be that of immediate full payment of the bonus. It is apparent that a vigorous effort will be made to pass a resolution to this effect. Commander O'Neil disclaims any knowledge as to what the convention will do.

Wets Gird for Battle.

Another question widely discussed among the Legionnaires is that of prohibition. Delegates of wet leanings are gathering the strength for a fight to put the convention on record as to the prohibition law.

PASSENGER DEATHS IN AIR ARE CUT MORE THAN HALF IN YEAR

The ratio of passenger miles flown to passenger fatalities on all scheduled transport lines in the United States increased more than 100 per cent during the first six months of this year over the corresponding period of last year, according to a report issued by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Clarence M. Young. During the first six months of 1930 the passenger miles flown for each passenger fatality were 2,275,664, as compared with 5,277,989 miles flown for each passenger fatality the first half of this year. The number of passengers killed decreased from 22 in the first six months of 1930 to 9 in the 1931 period.

A complete overhaul of a Travelair monoplane owned by the department of commerce and powered with a Wright motor, is nearing completion at Curtiss-Reynolds airport. The Beechnut autogiro, a Pitcairn powered by Wright, was completely overhauled last week in the Curtiss-Wright shops in only two days and students at the Curtiss-Wright school are completing an overhaul on a Fledgling training plane.

Bids have been taken by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, manager of Sky Harbor airport, for construction of a new hangar because of overcrowding in the present hangar, which contains 25 planes. Twenty-five students are enrolled in the flight class at Sky Harbor.

On the lines of American Airways, operating out of Chicago, during the first eight months of this year 1,222,000 mile were flown and more than 7,100 revenue passengers and 256,000 pounds of mail were carried, according to Col. Halsey Dunwoody, vice president. The lines run from Chicago to St. Louis, Kansas City, Memphis, Omaha, New Orleans, Evansville and Atlanta. August and July were the best months for passenger business and mileage, with the Chicago-St. Louis line carrying the greatest number of revenue passengers.

Air travel in Mexico is growing rapidly, as shown yesterday in a report of 100 per cent increase in revenue passengers and mail and 600 per cent increase in express carried on the C. A. T. air lines the first half of this year, as compared to the same period last year. During the two and one-half years of operation of the C. A. T. air lines an average daily speed of 185 miles an hour has been maintained with eleven Lockheed Vega planes, powered by 420 horsepower Wasp motors. The company operates only in Mexico, its service connecting with air lines of the United States at Brownsville and El Paso, Tex.

CASUALS IN HOBO VILLAGE SPURN OFFERS OF WORK

Pastor Tells of Move to Aid Vagrants.

In an area of small factories and rooming houses near the loop is situated a large "jungle" where hoboes make their home. This hobo retreat has been there for months. The "down and outers" bask there in the sun, watch their bubbling cans of slum, indifferent alike to police and protesting neighbors.

Situated on the south side of Monroe street, between Sangamon and Peoria streets, the jungle occupies half of the block. The south half is occupied by the Illinois Eye and Ear infirmary. Two vacant ramphackle buildings on the edge of the vacant lot have twice been fired by the vagrants. On rainy nights the leaky shanties built by the hoboes are untenable and they take possession of the deserted structures.

Refuse Offers of Work.

It was learned that the hoboes are indifferent to offers for work. They are content with a few potatoes and an onion for the mulligan pot and 25 cents for an occasional bottle of alky.

"We offered them work at first," said the Rev. William Seath, superintendent of the Christian Industrial league, 847 West Monroe street, "but we were repaid with curses. They are an undesirable lot. We are thankful for two things. They cause but little trouble except for the blight they are to the neighborhood and their petty stealing. The police never seem to bother them."

Contrasted to habitations of the hoboes in the jungle were the spic and span Christian Industrial league buildings. Workmen unable to obtain remunerative employment, but still maintaining their self-respect, were busy there mending furniture, scrubbing floors and painting walls to earn their keep. Five dollars a week and board and room is about the average earned. They get good food, a clean bed and a clubroom for reading and games.

50 Men in "Hobo Town."

In the half block of hobo homes about 50 men were loafing at 4 o'clock yesterday. A few lounged near the sidewalk and talked to passersby. In one corner, near a bubbling pot of stew, two men fought for a tattered sofa.

"If there were any way to do it we would like to see them moved," Mr. Seath said. "If they want work we will give it to them."

PHONE WORKER KILLED.

Rockport, Ind., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Ralph Ritchie, 36, was killed today when a telephone post he was repairing broke, throwing him to the ground.

COUNCIL ASKED TO ACT ON ONE MAN TROLLEYS

Corporation Counsel Sexton yesterday sent a communication to the city council requesting the aldermen to determine the city's policy on the petition of the Chicago Surface Lines before the Illinois commerce commission to operate one man cars.

The street car company has asked permission to operate one man cars on 15 lines and on 11 other lines at night only. The commission on Thursday refused to issue a temporary order permitting the installation of the one man cars, but ordered the street car men's union and other interested parties to conduct a survey for two weeks and present evidence.

Mr. Sexton, who appeared at the hearing, announced that he could not state the city's position until the council has acted. In his communication to the council he outlines the case before the commission and requests the aldermen to state their official attitude. The council does not meet until Oct. 21.

CHAIN STORE HELD UP.

Druggists See Peril to Small Businesses.

An appeal to Mayor Cermak to rid the outlying districts of the city of itinerant street peddlers, who cut into the trade of the small business concerns, was made yesterday by the Chicago Retail Druggists' association.

In a communication to the mayor, President O. U. Sisson of the druggists' organization, declared that the peddlers are a menace to the small business men. He said the taxpaying business men should be supported rather than the vendors, whose only contribution to the city's revenue is a license or permit fee.

"As a group of two thousand taxpayers who actually pay taxes," Mr. Sisson wrote, "we have voted to join the various neighborhood citizens' and business men's organizations in their fight against peddlers and street venders.

"We wonder if you really know just what a menace this peddler problem has become for the smaller merchants in the outlying districts. This letter to you is merely to ask for your aid in stamping out an evil which affects thousands of the smaller merchant property owners in Chicago."

Records in the city clerk's office show that the city has given authority to 4,435 peddlers to sell their wares during the second half of the current year, while 5,009 licenses were issued for the corresponding period of 1930. More peddlers may be licensed, however, officials said, before the year is over.

Plan Regulatory Ordinance.

The city revenue commission, according to Ald. Terence F. Moran [16th], chairman, is working now on the draft of an ordinance which will regulate vending, and dictate areas of the city from which the peddlers will be excluded. Ald. Moran said he had no trouble with venders in his ward, as none is allowed unless approved by the business men's organizations.

Peddlers now are excluded by city ordinance from the area bounded by Roosevelt road, the Chicago river on the west and north and the lake. Extensions of this area may be written into the ordinance now in preparation.

HUSBAND, WIFE STABBED; EACH ACCUSES OTHER

A double stabbing in which counter accusations were made by a husband and wife furnished North Damen avenue police with a mystery last night.

The wounded are Fred Loew, 4010 North Hoyne avenue, and Mrs. Frances Loew, operator of a beauty parlor at 5043 Dorchester avenue. He is her third husband. They are estranged.

The first word of the stabbing came when police were called to the office of Dr. Louis C. Sondel at 3957 Lincoln avenue. There they found Mrs. Loew suffering from a knife cut below the shoulder. She said her husband stabbed her in a quarrel over money. Sergt. Charles McCarthy and a squad hurried to the Hoyne avenue address. Breaking in the door, they found Loew nearly unconscious with five stab wounds near the heart.

Loew was taken to the Ravenswood hospital. His condition is serious. He told the police that his estranged wife stabbed him. She was held for further questioning.

SHOT WHILE CLEANING GUN.

Edward Shorbath, 24 years old, was accidentally shot in the abdomen last night while cleaning a revolver in his home at 3124 North Kilbourn avenue. He was taken to the county hospital. His condition is critical.

DOCTOR, FEARING DEATH IS NEAR, WEDS HIS NURSE

Believing himself on his deathbed, Dr. Herman H. Mal, 65 years old, a physician with offices at 800 West North avenue, summoned Municipal Judge John J. Rooney to his room in the Carolina hotel, 2348 North Clark street, yesterday, and requested the judge to marry him.

In the presence of two witnesses the judge united the supposedly dying man in matrimony with Mrs. Bertha Eckert, 49 years old, a countrywoman of his from Luxembourg, who had nursed him in his illness. The ceremony completed, the physician drew up and signed his will, dividing his $15,000 estate equally between his bride and his sister, Miss Emma Mal, his only close blood relative. Judge Rooney witnessed the will.

Fifteen minutes later Dr. Mal was carried downstairs in the arms of his bride and the hotel manager, placed in a car and whisked away to the Alexian Brothers hospital. Reached there by telephone last night he declared that since the wedding he felt much better, adding that his case might be less serious than it first appeared. He is to undergo an examination and possibly an operation today.

BAR ASSOCIATION FOR REVISION OF ANTI-TRUST LAW

Suggests Regulation as Substitute.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Revision of the federal anti-trust laws was urged by the American Bar association in convention here today. The association went on record as favoring an amendment "conferring upon the federal trade commission the power to pass in advance on restraint of trade contracts voluntarily submitted, by granting immunity to such contracts approved by the commission from the criminal, confiscatory, and three fold damage provisions of anti-trust laws."

For Regulation of Buses.

In submitting a report favoring such revision, Rush C. Butler of Chicago, chairman of the commerce commission, told the convention that public opinion "apparently had crystallized" since 1929 when the association convention took its stand against the Sherman measures.

Two other important reports were adopted by the convention today. One advocated federal legislation providing for the regulation of passenger motor vehicles engaged in interstate commerce and the other placed the association on record as favoring American participation in the world court.

"Material changes" in the federal system of taxation are inevitable, according to a report submitted by the committee on taxation. Commenting on the outlook the committee whereof said that—"In view of the serious treasury deficit resulting from the present shrinkage of taxable incomes, discussion is rife as to the advisability of broad tax revision and the tapping of new sources of revenue. It is idle to speculate whether the imminence of the 1932 election will prevent any general legislation next winter, but material changes in the federal system of taxation are quite likely bound to come."

Is There Property in Air?

A clash between real estate interests, represented by Nathan W. MacChesney of Chicago, counsel for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and the convention's committee on aeronautic law over the question of whether there is such a thing as property in air enlivened the session of the convention.

While the committee maintained that the development of the aviation industry should not be hampered by regulations that might interfere with the right to unrestricted use of air space by flying machines, Mr. MacChesney denounced this as an invasion of legitimate property rights and declared that property owners were entitled to protection against any injury done to the value of their holdings by noise or any other objectionable effects of airplanes. He demanded that any legislation that may be formulated by the association take this point into consideration.

Officers of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union issued a statement yesterday criticising Charles A. The American Bar association voted for the repeal of the prohibition amendment Thursday at the annual convention in Atlantic City. The W. C. T. U. communication declared that George Washington was an advanced temperance advocate.

14 PRISONERS DYNAMITE LOCK AND 13 GET AWAY

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 18.—(AP)—In a well timed plot, thirteen prisoners escaped from the New Castle county workhouse, the state penitentiary of Delaware, today after dynamiting a door lock and shooting a guard. The latter will probably recover.

Fourteen prisoners actually got away, but one was shot down and captured.

There were 252 men involved. The warden and six guards were attending court. Four guards in the shop were backed in a corner and their keys taken. Then a stick of dynamite opened the way to partial freedom.

After the thirteen men got safely away they scattered.

SECRET WEDDING OF MARY LEWIS TO OIL MAN TOLD

Singer on Honeymoon with Robert Hague.

New York, Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Mary Lewis, the little girl from Hot Springs, Ark., who became an operatic prima donna, has been the secret bride for several days of Robert L. Hague, a vice president of the Standard Oil company and divorced husband of Edith Bobe.

Just when or where Miss Lewis—who had her Pathé movie contract cancelled last year—went to the altar with the oil millionaire remained a secret.

The newlyweds, it was said, are out of town on a brief honeymoon, but will be back in a few days to carry on their respective money making endeavors.

Miss M. Gallagher, the singer's secretary and companion, became flustered when she realized she had given away her employer's secret.

"Nobody is supposed to know it," she said. "It was to be a dark secret."

Like Hague, Miss Lewis has made a previous expedition into matrimony. In 1927 she was married to Michael Bohnen, who at that time was starring with her in the Metropolitan Opera company. Artistic temperament soon reared its head, however, and they were divorced.

The oil magnate's divorce from Mme. Bobe was kept secret for twenty-nine months, becoming public only last March. He and his first wife were co-victims when they were set upon and robbed in Portland, Me., in 1927 of $100,000 in jewelry.

The thieves were believed by police to have been the persons responsible for the Dot King and Louise Lawson murders.

FRANCE'S "FINAL OFFER" IN NAVAL ROW IS REJECTED

Italy and England Turn Down Proposals.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Sept. 18.—A three cornered conversation today between Robert L. Craigie, Augusto Rosso, and Rene Massigli—British, Italian and French naval experts—resulted in the rejection by the British and Italians of the latest French proposal to settle the naval deadlock.

Today's meeting followed upon the arrival of Mr. Craigie, who was hastily summoned from London. It was called to examine the newest document in the controversy, the French memorandum sent to Rome Aug. 27 containing the Paris government's "final concessions."

Shatter Italy's Parity Stand.

The new terms superseded the basis of discussion last March when Arthur Henderson, former British foreign minister, visited Premier Mussolini, and afterwards conferred with Aristide Briand, French foreign minister. A tentative accord was reached then, but which the French rejected when Admiral Violette, chief of the marine ministry, asserted that a reduction of 66,000 tons in replacements, as provided under the building statutes, endangered national defense.

The new French proposals, a compromise on the replacement figures, are not acceptable to the Fascists because they entirely shatter Mussolini's parity pretensions, and are distasteful to the British because their adoption would smash the admiralty's two power standard policy.

Agree Only on Cruisers.

The only point on which Italy and France are agreed is the category of the 10,000 ton cruisers—seven apiece. The Fascists are also prepared to grant France a superiority in submarine tonnage—90,000 tons, compared with 52,000 for Italy—the same total the United States, England, and Japan are allocated.

Complete disagreement exists over battleships, as France insists on building a ship to counterbalance Germany's new pocket cruiser.

Both British and Italians expressed extreme pessimism tonight over the prospects for any outlet from the impasse before the international disarmament conference meets in February.

36 RACKETEERS, RUM SELLERS RUSH TO FIX INCOME TAX IN N. Y.

New York, Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Thirty-six racketeers, bootleggers and income tax dodgers have flocked into the federal building in the last two weeks in an effort to straighten out their affairs with the government, it was learned today. Two of these have managed to compromise their cases and have paid into the federal till $15,000 and $35,000 respectively. Their names were not revealed.

Others have not been so successful since the policy of Hugh McQuillan, chief of the local bureau of intelligence of the department of internal revenue, is to refuse to compromise any case in which the government has knowledge of infractions of the law.

The reason for the latest influx of delinquent taxpayers was, as far as the federal officials are able to judge, the recent conviction of James J. Quinlivan, former patrolman of the vice squad, who received a three year sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary for failing to file income tax returns.

HEAD OF THREE BUSINESS HOUSES HANGS HIMSELF

Alvin L. Brumund, 46 years old, hanged himself yesterday in the cooling plant of the A. L. Brumund Dairy company, which he founded twenty-five years ago at 125 Lake street, Waukegan.

The body was found in the evening by two employés. They had last seen him alive in the morning and it is believed he killed himself before noon.

Mr. Brumund was president of the Pure Water Ice company and the R. O. Andrew company, a milling concern at McHenry, and was part owner of the Genesee theater in Waukegan. He was a past president of the Glen Flora Country club. Although he was known to have been a stockholder in the Waukegan National bank, which was closed on June 13, friends said that he was in no dire financial straits. They were unable to advance any reason why he should have killed himself.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Grace Brumund; an adult son, and an adult daughter.

James P. Vandenorth, 50 years old, head of Vandenorth & Sons, an automobile finance company, 7848 South Ashland avenue, committed suicide by taking poison yesterday in his room in the Bernard hotel, 4170 Drexel boulevard. Police said he had been despondent over business reverses and separation from his wife.

ACTS TO INSURE PROSECUTION IN AUTO FATALITIES

CRIMINAL COURT.

John Lewis, larceny, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell; Daniel McIntyre, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Rudolph Desort.

Edward Codecki, larceny, sentenced to 1 year in Pontiac reformatory; Arvid Skold, burglary, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell by Judge Philip Sullivan.

Two cases in which automobile drivers charged with manslaughter almost escaped prosecution caused Coroner Bundesen yesterday to order a tightening up of the system by which cases are sent from coroner's juries to the county grand jury.

In one case a defendant escaped prosecution for more than a year, and undoubtedly would never have been brought up for trial had not the lawyer for the victim in the case sought the aid of the coroner and the Chicago crime commission.

This was the case of Henry Overmeyer, who was arrested on Sept. 6, 1930, after his automobile had run over and killed Mrs. Ferminanda P. Hernstein, 50 years old, 45 East Schiller street, as she was crossing La Salle street at Division.

Turned Over to Police.

A coroner's inquest was held on Sept. 15, 1930, and the jury found Overmeyer was criminally liable and ordered him held to the grand jury. Deputy Coroner Dennis H. Carroll delivered the defendant into the hands of the police with a mittimus directing that he be placed in the county jail "until released by due process of law." Instead of taking Overmeyer to jail immediately Desk Sergeant John Quinn at the East Chicago avenue station permitted him to stay in the station lockup for several hours. Quinn asserted that Overmeyer had fainted at the announcement of the coroner's jury verdict and had begged for time to procure a bond.

Finally, at 5:05 o'clock that night, a bond signed by Judge Joseph Burke was presented and Sergt. Quinn released Overmeyer. He said he pinned the bond on to the mittimus.

Sergeant's Story of Case.

"I didn't know what to do with it then," the desk sergeant confessed yesterday to Sergts. Francis J. Donohue and Charles Reynolds, investigators for Coroner Bundesen. "Finally I decided to send it to the coroner's office and some officer took it over there."

But the bond and mittimus never reached the coroner's office, investigation showed. The failure of Sergt. Quinn to list the bond in his regular station bond book also was significant, Reynolds and Donohue pointed out.

After an attorney for the family of the victim had brought the failure of prosecution in Overmeyer's case to the coroner's attention, and the facts were learned, the coroner's investigators immediately instituted a search for Overmeyer, and yesterday he surrendered at the Criminal Court building. He posted a new bond, signed by his mother and father, and was released pending action on his case before the grand jury.

Bundesen Plans New System.

"The common practice, as I understand it, has been to send the mittimus and bond directly to the clerk of the Criminal court," said Coroner Bundesen yesterday. "It seems to me the police have no right to accept a bond in cases of this nature. The prisoner should be taken to the county jail, and if he is entitled to freedom on bail the bail should be given in the Criminal court.

"At any rate I shall confer with State's Attorney Swanson at the earliest date possible, to have the law and procedure definitely fixed in this matter. Further, I shall arrange a new method whereby in every case in which a coroner's jury holds a defendant to the grand jury the state's attorney shall receive a direct notice from the coroner, independent of that delivered through the police."

Second Case Is Cited.

The second case was that of Philip Gasikowski, 2213 North Rockwell street, whose automobile on Aug. 31 killed Adam Podworny. At the inquest, held on Sept. 3, Gasikowski was held to the grand jury. The police, instead of taking him directly to jail, as the coroner's order directed, held him until 6 o'clock at night, when a bond was obtained from Municipal Judge Edward L. Scheffler.

Six days later a bewildered policeman walked into the office of Chief Clerk Meizar Delano of the Criminal court.

"The sergeant at my station [Shakespeare avenue] found these papers laying around his desk and doesn't know what to do with them. Do they belong here?"

"If the sergeant had thrown the papers in the waste basket or somewhere else," said Delano, "the case never would have reached the grand jury."

JOCELYN LEE'S TRIAL DELAYED UNTIL OCTOBER 9

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Jocelyn Lee, hot tempered actress, won a continuance of her trial on peace disturbing charges until Oct. 9 when called before Judge Harold Landreth today to face accusations of wrecking premises where her ex-husband, Luther Reed, was a dinner guest.

The actress giggled and confided, "I can beat this case. In the meantime, I have a present for my husband," therewith she handed Reed a summons on a contempt of court charge growing out of his asserted backwardness in paying alimony.

Ivan [Ike] St. John, editor of a magazine, is the complainant against the actress, it being his home whose windows Miss Lee is charged with breaking when Reed would not come out and see her.

Charging that her fiancé of six years' standing had pledged his affections to "a younger, wealthier and more buxom widow," Mrs. Stanna Petersen, 46 years old, 3150 West North avenue, filed a $50,000 suit for breach of promise yesterday in the Superior court against Emil W. Anderson, 54 years old, until recently a resident in her home.

Anderson met her in 1925, and almost immediately borrowed her automobile and $2,000 for use in the machine company which he then owned, Mrs. Petersen charged in the bill filed by Attorney Harry X. Cole. He visited her home frequently, praised her cooking, and took her out evenings, generally on money from her purse, she charges. In 1929, when his business failed, he moved into her home.

On May 3 of this year, she asserts, he told her that she was too old to be his bride, but that he would marry her daughter Ethel, 20 years old, if Ethel consented. Shortly after that she found that he was spending most of his evenings with a wealthy widow living on the north side.

BY HAL FOUST.

The county commissioners, sitting as a committee yesterday, voted to kill the Vinson street project for the construction of a new traffic artery running northwest through the forest preserve and over the Des Plaines river from Augusta boulevard at Thatcher road to North avenue. The action was taken on a protest brought by property owners of Oak Park and River Forest, objecting to the creation of any through traffic facilities near their homes.

"I can sympathize," said Commissioner Homer Byrd, chairman of the board's road and bridge committee, "with the objections of these home owners to fast and heavy traffic passing their doors. The solution to the congestion and hazard on these suburban streets will not come until an elevated highway is constructed from the business center of Chicago."

Crowd Cheers Appeal.

There was applause from the assembly hall, crowded with suburbanites, as Commissioner William Busse urged the home owners to get behind the elevated highway promotion rather than to spend their efforts in trying to get through traffic routed on the other fellow's street.

At present, there is no traffic artery across the Des Plaines river between Lake street and North avenue, a distance of a mile and a half. A bridge was recently completed on Chicago avenue, but the connecting streets in Melrose Park, west of the river, are inadequate.

Neither Lake street nor North avenue is a desirable automobile thoroughfare farther east because of street car tracks and business houses that attract a pedestrian movement. Augusta boulevard, in Chicago, was recently widened and paved but Oak Park and River Forest have made no provision for carrying the boulevard traffic through the suburbs.

New Exits Demanded.

George Barton, traffic engineer of the Chicago Motor club, said the automobile owners of Chicago must have an additional exit from the city to the west. Col. H. L. Kellogg, representing the Chicago Association of Commerce, and Robert Kingery of the Chicago Regional Planning association told the commissioners that the pressure of traffic would eventually break through the suburban barriers and that the suburbanites might as well accept this as an eventuality.

COURT CANCELS 75% LOAN IN WAR ON SHARKS

First Victory in Legal Campaign.

The first legal victory in the drive against loan sharks was scored yesterday in Municipal court when Judge John J. Lupe ordered cancellation of both the principal and interest on a note for which the lender is alleged to have charged approximately 75 per cent interest.

The original plaintiff was J. F. Shapiro, doing business as the American Auto Investment company, 100 North La Salle street. Defendants were Charles F. Stoddard, who signed a note of $733.50 to Shapiro, and Hugo Heller, a manufacturer of laundry machinery, who guaranteed the note.

$329 Represents Interest.

Stoddard, requiring $240 to pay a balance due on his car, went to Shapiro, who agreed to advance him that sum plus $163.75, representing a straight cash loan. The total advanced by Shapiro, therefore, was $403.75, the balance of $329.72 representing interest. Stoddard was to pay back the entire sum in twelve monthly installments of $61.15, the agreement being that Stoddard would have immediate possession of the car.

Upon payment of the first installment Stoddard claimed the car. Shapiro, according to testimony, refused to turn it over on advice of his "finance committee." Stoddard thereupon stopped payments on the note, an action which permitted the lender to execute confessed judgment. Shapiro then sold the car for $304.

Thereupon Heller, as guarantor of the note, decided to hire an attorney. The lawyer drew up an affidavit of merits, charging Shapiro with usury, fraud and circumvention, and went into court on a suit for $1,500 damages. The lender, now on the defensive, went before Judge Donald S. McKinley asking that the petition be quashed. He was overruled.

Cites Old Common Law.

The case then went before Judge Lupe. Heller's lawyer cited the common law of the time of Queen Anne, which sets forth that any lender committing usury shall lose both principal and interest on his claim. Shapiro, envisioning a possible larger loss in the $1,500 damage suit, did not contest the action and a judgment to cancel the entire note was entered by agreement.

Heller, advised by his counsel that usury was a criminal offense as well as a civil dereliction, announced he would apply for incorporation papers for an organization to be known as the National League Opposed to Usury, to fight loan sharks.

U. S. Refunds $33,569 Tax to Mrs. John Hertz

A refund of $33,569 to Mrs. John Hertz, wife of the Chicago capitalist, for overassessment of income tax in 1918, was announced yesterday by the internal revenue department. An investigation disclosed that profit reported from the sale of a number of shares of capital stock was overstated.

Two U. S. Engineers Put Out 2½ Year Old Fire

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Two American engineers brought to Rumania to put out a fire today snuffed out flames which had been burning for two and a half years in an oil well at Moreni Trutjkns, owned by the Rumano-Americana company. The engineers, Kindlay and Schoopp, blasted the fire with dynamite. European engineers had tried in vain to extinguish the blaze.

RETURN NELSON INDICTMENT IN BANK INQUIRY

begged an appointment because he was out of work and had a family to support.

The jury had previously returned an indictment against Norman O. Geyer, former president of the bank, charging him with receiving money after the bank was closed. Mr. Geyer put up a bail bond of $20,000 and is to appear to have a trial date set at the opening of the Lake county Circuit court term by Judge Ralph J. Dady Oct. 5.

The indictments were returned before Judge Dady by Frank T. Fowler, foreman of the jury. The judge fixed the bonds of the defendants at $5,000 on each indictment, or $5,000 for Nelson and Smith and $10,000 for Connors. He ordered capiases issued for each of the defendants. These were turned over to Sheriff Lester Tiffany.

On advice of Prosecutor Smith, Sheriff Tiffany will not serve the capiases until Sept. 30. The judge is leaving on a vacation and will not return until that date. The jury adjourned to meet next Tuesday.

Witnesses before the jury during the day were Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Trust company; E. P. Vollertson, cashier of the former National Bank of the Republic, for which the Waukegan bank was correspondent, and J. E. Bohle, employé of the Waukegan bank. Hugo E. Otte, official of the National Republic Investment company, affiliated with the Chicago bank, sent records of its dealing with the Waukegan bank to the jury.

Banker's Son Fears Gang.

Twelve hours after his release on bond Carlos Ariani, 20 year old son of Savario Ariani, president of the closed First Italian State bank, who is missing with $138,355 of the bank funds, asked the state's attorney's office for protection. The son phoned from a north side hotel stating he had been followed by three Italians.

Assistant State's Attorney Henry E. Ayers, in charge of the banking investigation, sent two investigators to guard Carlos, his mother, Mrs. Mariana Ariani, and a brother, Romolo, 18 years old. Carlos said he was riding with his mother and brother when he noticed an automobile with three men following him.

Chester Willoughby, former secretary for the late United States Senator William McKinley, was appointed receiver for the First Italian Safety Deposit company, affiliated with the closed bank, by Federal Judge James A. Wilkerson. The appointment was made on the recommendation of State Auditor Nelson following the filing of an involuntary bankruptcy petition by Frank Giovanello, a depositor with a claim of $3,400.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

LAWYERS ON PROHIBITION LAW.

The American Bar association has repeated its decision on federal prohibition. At the Atlantic City convention Thursday the vote on the repeal of the eighteenth amendment was 13,779 for and 5,625 against. It is needless to say that this is the expression of men representing the opinion of the profession concerned with the nature, structure and use of law.

Law is like medicine in one respect. There can be as much popular fallacy regarding one as the other and as much inclination to look for miracles from a legislative enactment as from a physician's prescription. One of the attractive errors of democracy is to confuse majorities and right and justice. All that certainly can be said of a majority is that it is a majority. The wisdom of its proceeding has no guaranty and experience will not take lessons or orders from it. Conversely, experience will make law.

The proper legal mind could not tolerate the eighteenth amendment in the constitution of the United States, nor could it regard with indifference all the legal consequences which would flow from it. A democracy recognizes that a royal edict or an order in council taking the effect of law can be tyrannical, unworkable and unjust and is properly opposed. It does not so readily recognize or admit that the act of a democratic majority can be of the same nature.

The United States made a mistake in amending its constitution in a manner not consistent with the purpose of that organic law. Alien matter was introduced. The consequences have been demoralizing. Law has its own domain which is not coextensive with human life. The eighteenth amendment took in too much territory. Legal intelligence observes cause and effect and advises a correction of the mistake in the democratic legal processes. The correction may be a little more difficult because there is not a personal dictator to cajole, frighten or persuade, but a democratic majority to bring to its senses. But the correction will be made because a republic cannot live on an accumulation of mistakes.

THE CHARITY GAME.

A check for $44,480.10 has been given Samuel Insull Jr., chairman of the relief committee, covering the proceeds of the charity game played by the White Sox and the Cubs. The turning over of the money is a timely occasion for a public recognition of the liberality of the owners, Mr. Wrigley and Mr. Comiskey, who willingly played their teams for a charity benefit, a free gift of gate receipts they could have put in their own bank accounts. Their teams are their property which could be used exclusively for maintenance and profit. They contributed the use of their property—it can be so regarded—and made a very substantial addition to the relief funds of the city.

WHY DOG RACES ARE NOT CIVIC.

The Thornton Coursing club was closed Thursday. A temporary injunction which had protected it was dissolved that day in court. The proprietors, on the advice of their attorneys, thereupon called it a season. A decision will be sought in the Supreme court. Thornton is a dog racing track. The dog tracks seek to conduct parimutuel betting such as is permitted at the horse tracks. Injunctions have helped them, but they have not made a satisfactory go of it, not being able to convince any one that dog racing is civic. This is strange.

Betting at the horse races was legalized by the legislature for considerations granted the state and county fair associations. Gambling at the horse tracks became service. It ceased to be antisocial in urban centers when a percentage of the gain was given to agriculture. The squires found a morality for it when it raised a fund for farm show premiums and other agricultural perquisites. At the close of the recent horse racing season the rural take from the several seasons on the Chicago tracks was several million dollars. That would make anything moral and the formula seems simple, but the dog tracks haven't found it, although they have a naturally strong case.

Some of the very best hoodlums have been interested in dog races and it is properly urged that they are the poor man's sport. They offer the best chance he has to drop his money, a right he should have in common with the millionaire. Although the greyhound runs his own race chasing the mechanical rabbit and is supposed to be honest as well as dumb, the absence of a jockey does not deprive the sport of the necessary element of crookedness. The jockeyless dog can be hampered as well as the jockey ridden horse. The bettor at a dog track is not deprived of his inalienable right of being cheated. He can be swindled.

The races are at night and the poor man has time for them. The rich man goes to the horse race and comes away to buy a new model of his favorite car. The horse races presumably improve automotive engineering, gasoline having taken the place of oats, but nothing mechanical has taken the place of dogs. The poor man sees a dog race and his wife later buys a Pekingese or Pomeranian. The only things of which races can improve the breed are automobiles, airplanes, boats, and dogs.

On outstanding facts the case for dog racing seems to be excellent, but the promoters have not found a way to put the right thing in the right pockets. That's where the horses were so much more intelligent and hence more moral and civic.

DE KALB FOR THE ELEVATED HIGHWAY.

Another important community has indorsed the west side elevated highway project both as a permanent improvement and for its emergency value in aid of unemployment. Civic leaders of De Kalb have adopted a resolution asking Gov. Emmerson to include it in his call for a special session in order that work may be given this winter. A similar resolution it is said will be passed by the De Kalb city council and by the De Kalb Chamber of Commerce. At the meeting taking action the benefit of better access to Chicago and from Chicago to neighboring cities, and in fact to the state generally, was emphasized. Under present conditions the advantage of the state highways is heavily discounted because so much time is lost on congested surface streets in Chicago. With the Austin-Kinzie elevated highway completed, the run from De Kalb will be greatly reduced in time and made safer and pleasanter. La Salle has already spoken to the same effect, through Representative Soderstrom.

This problem of safe and convenient access to Chicago is one of the most important in the road program of the state and middle west. Chicago is the greatest metropolitan center west of New York and millions seek access to it yearly for business and pleasure. It greatly needs main arterial highways cutting through the congested districts and an essential of such arteries is as much freedom from cross traffic as can be given. The Lake Shore drive and the South Shore drive are illustrations. McCormick road, Archer avenue, and Ogden avenue along part of their routes are protected by the drainage canal. The Austin-Kinzie elevated highway along the North Western embankment will be the only straight east and west artery that is not constantly crossed.

The money is available for this great public improvement. If Chicago will especially benefit, Chicago contributes in greater proportion to the fund from which this money would be drawn. But all the state will benefit, especially those communities of the metropolitan district which also contribute substantially to the gas tax. The equities of the expenditure are thus assured. And the benefit in the form of employment this winter of from 25 to 30 thousand men needs no argument. Nothing the governor and the legislature have the power to do is so well sustained as this project, which is both a well considered permanent public improvement of great benefit to the state and a means of unemployment relief of the best kind.

A LOST WASHINGTON MEMORIAL.

The colonial farmhouse at West Chester, Pa., famed as the headquarters of Gen. Washington in some of the fighting about Philadelphia to keep Howe out of that city, has been destroyed by fire. With it went papers and relics esteemed of value. From the highlands of the Hudson down through Jersey into Pennsylvania there are a number of surviving memorials of Washington's military career, which wasn't of large geographical area, and all are valuable. It would seem a piece of carelessness to permit one of them to be burned down; hardly a desirable way of preparing for the celebration of the bicentennial anniversary of Washington's birth.

Aside from any peculiarly valuable associations and traditions, any bit of colonial building now surviving may be regarded as important in the matter of admonitory good taste. It is understandable why the American countryside lost its original gift of farm and domestic architecture, but the loss, when explained, remains unfortunate. The later people were in a hurry and wanted economy and convenience which they did not find in pleasing form. The old style preserves a model and possibly an incentive. And, furthermore, it is worth something to keep some evidences that the United States was not born yesterday.

Editorial of the Day

[The Sun, Baltimore.]

Senator Jim Watson of Indiana, who is reputed to have remarked that he would have to find some issue on which he could battle President Hoover to have much chance for reelection next year, may have found the issue he has been looking for in the plan to use Canadian granite for the George Rogers Clark memorial to be erected at Vincennes. It is true that Mr. Hoover appears to have had no hand in the business of selecting the granite, but Senator Fess of Ohio, the chairman of Mr. Hoover's Republican national committee, is also chairman of the memorial commission. That may make it possible to get part of the blame of the "insult" to Indiana limestone on the White House doorsteps.

The issue which may get phrased as taking building stone to Bedford is one on which Jim Watson should be at his best. One can almost hear him on the hustings lambasting those who have so little sense of patriotism as to go to foreign parts for building stone with Indiana limestone right at hand. And it may be that the Hoosiers will rally to the Watsonian defense of home industry, and give him that bulge needed to continue him in the seats of the mighty.

There is currently, of course, one drawback in this issue of patronizing home industry exclusively as the way to prosperity for the home folk. It is that the Smoot-Hawley bill, rigidly designed on that theory, has been found to have an enormous kickback by stopping foreign purchases as well as sales. And some one may be unkind enough to recall Senator Watson's prediction, on the eve of passing that Smoot-Hawley bill, that prosperity would blossom immediately. This, however, is merely an off chance. With the great issue of Canadian granite versus Indiana limestone for an Indiana memorial, Senator Watson should be able to make a lot of political hay in Indiana. It looks like a good break for him, and his type of political stock in trade.

WHAT IS THE BEST MALARIA METHOD?

FOR thirty years the Italian government has been driving against malaria. They have nearly fifty million people living under very crowded conditions. Their highlands are entirely mountainous and unfit for agriculture, or else the soil has been worn out by thousands of years of cultivation.

Their lowlands are fertile, but the people were not able to use them profitably because of malaria. The vitality of the Italian people could not withstand the racial degradation which malaria brings about. The imperial city was surrounded by the richest of land, but so bad was malaria that they were compelled to get their milk from Milan and their vegetables from Naples.

The government began by taking over the manufacture and sale of quinine. They sold it at a ridiculously low price, but they made enough profit to provide a fair malaria control fund. Supplying cheap quinine, and compelling the people to use it, converted the Italian malaria into a mild disease, but did not lessen its prevalence. With the coming into power of Mussolini the malaria campaign became militant. The type of work to be accomplished is cut to fit the circumstances, but whatever is decided to be best is done.

In certain areas larvicide is used; in others, screening. In places the use of top minnows gives the best results; in others, the country is converted into a stock and dairy district. Certain lowlands are filled up by damming the streams and forcing them to overflow. The silt deposited by the overflowed water fills up ponds and raises the ground level enough to make it drain. Incidentally, the soil is freshened and made more fertile. A German observer, who recently explored the Mississippi from its mouth to its source, criticized the American government for not forcing the Mississippi to overflow periodically. He praised the Hollanders for the reclamation of millions of acres from the sea. Dr. L. W. Hackett, writing of the Italian program in the Southern Medical Journal, says: "All in all, the Italians have wrested and withheld more land from the domination of the waters than the Dutch."

In other places the Italians are doing major drainage. Where mosquitoes were breeding in stagnant, warm waters they have sometimes killed them off by diverting streams of cold running water into the stagnant ponds. In other cases where mosquitoes were breeding in cooler waters they have killed them off by stagnating the water and causing it to become warm.

Whatever method seemed best in a particular location was adapted for that enterprise. Most of the work is done by the government, but under the law the cost is assessed against the property. The special tax may be levied for a term of years, but eventually the government gets back its investment. The land owner gets his money out of the increased value of his land and the greater efficiency of labor.

COATED TONGUE.

REPLY.

It can be scraped off with the back of a caseknife. Chewing gum is of some service. The use of germicidal mouth washes is helpful. Since this coating is so promptly renewed after removal, prevention is more important than cure.

D. H. C. writes: Twenty years ago I had an ingrown toenail. I cut a notch in the center in front. I have kept this nail notched ever since. The soreness disappeared and has never returned.

UNPAID LOAN.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I made a loan of $2,000 to a friend. I have no papers other than canceled certified check. 1. Have I a right to sue for the amount due and interest agreed upon, at any time? 2. No payments have been made. Would it make a difference if I accepted a partial payment? 3. Would prefer remaining friends, but I need the money, now past due. How could I go about making a legal agreement requiring payment? 4. Should he pay for this? He has a thriving business. M. B.

1. If it was agreed that he was to pay you in a reasonable time, then you should wait a reasonable time before suing.
2. No.
3. You could ask him to sign a note.
4. We do not see why there need be any costs connected with the signing of a note. If you desire security and have had no experience in such transactions, then it would be advisable for you to employ an attorney and it would be fair to expect the debtor to stand the expense, but, since you are not in a good position to dictate terms, it might not be advisable to insist upon this. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FACTORY NOISES.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—[Friend of the People.]—What action could be obtained in having a lot of "avoidable" noise stopped, such as the clanging and screeching of kettles made by the night crew of the factory in our neighborhood? Neighbors in our block have discussed this matter for the last two years, as it really is very annoying. This seems to be a lot of carelessness by the men, more than anything else, and it starts at 9 p. m. and continues till 5 a. m. G. S.

The officers who investigated report they interviewed the superintendent of the factory in question, and he stated he would endeavor to abate the nuisance by closing the windows on the 35th street side of the building, and also that he would warn the employés to be more careful in the handling of kettles so as to make less noise, under the penalty of discharge.

ADMINISTRATOR'S FEE.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I was named administrator of an estate. The property was sold and the money divided among the heirs. What fee am I allowed for my services? None was stipulated in the will. R. G.

The statute specifies not over 6 per cent of the personal property. Within this limit the allowance is largely discretionary with the probate judge.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

YESSIR, IT'S GREAT TO SEE the interest we all have in education and culture and things like that. It's shown by our forgetting about new lows on the stock market and how to make our own 3 per cent home brew, and this here now depression, and getting all excited over education now that the colleges and schools have opened up. Education is the one big thing people talk about. Of course, they have different opinions one way and another about it, but education is the thing they're thinking about. Now, for instance, a lot of people think that Yale will slam the everlasting toplight out of Chicago, but other people say that Old Man Stagg has got a lot of tricks up his sleeve that will make Yale look sick. And some of us think Notre Dame will pob up bigger than ever, while others believe that school has seen its best days in football for a while and that Wisconsin is just going to run wild. They were talking education on top of the bus yesterday and one man said that at the end of the season there wouldn't be but one football team in the country with an uncrossed goal line and that had won every game it had played. And the man with him says, "You're dam right; Zuppke will put Illinois back where they belong." And the first man told the other fellow he ought to go to somebody's hospital and have his head examined, because he was talking about Northwestern. And another man spoke up across the aisle and wanted to know what about Michigan, and the first man said are they going to play again this year; I thought they had given up football and started the team to playing tiddilywinks; they were pretty good at tiddilywinks. Everybody got so excited talking education then that the conductor came up and said they'd have to pipe down or he'd call a policeman, the conductor being what you'd call a poor illiterate and having no interest in education.

PAN?

"I am Pan," he said.
I was stupefied.
Why, he couldn't be Pan;
The creature lied!

He went to the river and pulled a weed.
"This," he said, "is my magic reed."
He whistled a tune, solemnly,
And I saw what I know I did not see.
He had two hoofs (but this isn't true),
I danced and twirled on the river's brink
And knelt with Pan for a cooling drink.

Laugh if you wish!
I'm weak with laughter,
But I'll not be so sure of things
Hereafter.

JOHN D. gave away another bright, shiny new dime yesterday. Nobody is going to make us believe that the depression is going to last forever until Mr. Rockefeller commences giving away seven cents instead of a dime.

WE HAVE READ with interest the last day or two Mr. Alphonse Capone's great indignation concerning his being dragged into vulgar publicity by the so-called Mr. Mike de Pike letters. Mr. Capone states emphatically that he wishes to be let alone and seems to fear that he next will be accused of being a social climber. Or of splitting his infinitives or going to sleep at the opera. Goodness, is Alphonse to have no rest?

RHEUMATISM, front paged the news sheets yesterday, it being something of a dull day, costs the United States two hundred million dollars a year. And we've known for years that all you have to do to ward off rheumatism is to carry a potato around in your pocket. But maybe there's some who didn't know. All right, we're telling you.

THE ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE is going to be asked to do something about gangsters found in possession of machine guns. The old explanation that the one in possession of the machine gun always made, "I makes me own Swiss cheese an' I keeps de gun to shoot de holes in, see," always seemed to us as a trifle misleading.

SOME OF THE COLLEGES are now accepting farm produce in exchange for tuition. This thing is growing, and we may expect soon, on Grandfather's day or Mother-in-Law's day, to see the slogans, "Say It with Cabbages!" or "Say It with Onions!" or something like that.

HOMESICK.

O hills of my New England, when the spring
Spreads like an emerald blaze across your slopes,
My heart returns to you, a homesick thing
That finds the way again, although it gropes
Through sudden mist. I seek the maidenhair,
The pink arbutus creeping through the moss,
The rosy mountain laurel flaunting there
Its loveliness, and all that makes my loss.

I miss your dappled summer solitudes
Of forest shade and sunlight through a rift;
But how I long to walk your autumn woods!
O hills of my New England, when you lift
Your sumptuous coronets of flame that fall
Has crowned you with, I miss you most of all.

ADELAIDE LOVE.

BOSTON has ordered a stone ribbon draped around a statue of two nude boys in front of the public library. We are glad of that. They were so shocked at the statue we feared they would move the Bunker Hill monument down to the library and place it carefully over the little stone boys. Boston becomes more amusing every day.

THE BEST AVAILABLE WEAPON

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 19, 1915.

WASHINGTON. — Dr. Constantin Theodor Dumba, Austro-Hungarian ambassador to the United States, whose recall has been asked by this government because of his admitted proposal to instigate strikes in American munition plants, defends his actions in a letter sent to Secretary Lansing and made public by the ambassador. Dr. Dumba protests against the request for his recall as unjust and complains of the restrictions imposed by this government upon his communications with his home government. He says the diplomatic representatives of the allies in this country enjoy uncensored use of the cables, a privilege which is denied him. He takes exception to Secretary Lansing's charge that he "confessed to having conspired to bring about strikes in American munition works."

STOCKHOLM.—Serious revolts have broken out in a number of Russian cities following the czar's action in proroguing the duma. The police in the suburbs of Petrograd and other centers where ammunition works are located are reported to have made wholesale arrests of striking workmen.

SEPTEMBER 19, 1901.

CANTON, O.—Into his old home town, over which hangs a pall of mourning never known in all its history before, the body of President McKinley was borne at noon today through streets black with crêpe and through lanes of sorrow stricken faces down which the tears were streaming, with little effort made to conceal or restrain them. The remains lay in state at the courthouse until 8 p. m. and were viewed by thousands. The body was then removed to the McKinley home.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Both lawyers assigned by Judge Emory to defend Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, have consented reluctantly to undertake the task. Attorney Robert C. Titus yielded when urged by a score of telegrams sent to him at Milwaukee, and he has wired to Loran L. Lewis that he will return to Buffalo on Friday to confer with him on the line of defense. The acceptance of the assignment by Attorneys Lewis and Titus makes certain a speedy trial for the assassin.

SEPTEMBER 19, 1881.

LONG BRANCH, N. J.—President Garfield had a bad Sunday, and he is undoubtedly growing weaker. There is some reason to think that there was another slight rigor about midnight, but there is no means of verifying it. The sentinels about the home are armed with muskets tonight, which is unusual. Dr. D. W. Bliss is reported to have told a friend confidentially that he now fears the President will have two chills daily. At the cabinet consultation at midnight, when the state dispatch to Minister Lowell at London was prepared, it was admitted that the case was almost hopeless. The dispatch, which was sent by Attorney General MacVeagh, concluded: "The President has been slowly growing weaker, and his present condition excites the gravest apprehension." Dr. Boynton said that the lung trouble is what physicians call a secondary abscess and one that occurs in the course of blood poisoning.

WASHINGTON.—Sergt. Mason of the United States army, who recently shot at Guiteau in his cell, issued an address "to all good people of the United States who hate assassins." He says that he is not ashamed of his act, and says that if the United States army of 25,000 men was at the jail 20,000 would kill Guiteau and the other 5,000 would desert before they would have anything to do with him.

CHICAGO.—For more than sixty days, from the Ohio to the Mississippi, a drought of terrible severity has prevailed, and THE TRIBUNE is able, through its crop correspondent, to get some general idea of the magnitude of the loss the country has sustained. The corn crop is badly damaged everywhere and pastures are almost ruined. The potato crop generally amounts to almost a total failure, and vegetables of all sorts are certain to be very scarce this winter.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

THE BONUS.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—We read in your article on "Veterans and Relief" where the vets were organizing committees to demand special contributions from the national treasury. The writer seems to think we are begging for something, but we are not. We earned the bonus. And we are not asking for any special consideration, we are asking for the money now, instead of in 1945 when we may not need it.

We did not cry when we were getting a dollar and ten cents a day, while other patriotic persons were making fifteen dollars a day in shipyards and eating three squares every day. He also talks about the aid already given the vets; does he mean selling apples and Eskimo pies? Does the writer know that we veterans bought Liberty bonds, and had to pay our own insurance while we were in the service? When we were discharged we received sixty dollars to buy a suit of clothes and pay board and lodging until we could find a job. It seems to us that those things are forgotten. If we had work and were earning our daily bread we would not need the bonus, but we are not. So all we are supposed to do is go along singing "Happy Days Are Here Again," or "Just Around the Corner." COUPLE OF VETERANS.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—I note in your Sept. 13 issue an article on the Chicago postoffice and the quotation by Mr. Gordon, superintendent of the Griffiths company, in which he states that, among the thousands of applications they have from labor for jobs on the postoffice less than 5 per cent are union men and emphasizes the necessity of union membership for workers on that job and also of experienced men.

The requirement for experienced men is, of course, valid, but on a government project in connection with the government plan to push public building to relieve unemployment are the conditions such that the applicant must be a union man? In other words, is the government plan for relief of unemployment only for the union men? J. W. O'CONNOR.

FRENCH PRIDE.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—At the present time when the dole is being urged by many misguided persons the following statement made by the Paris correspondent of one of the large American daily newspapers should be of interest:

"Unlike Great Britain and Germany, France has no official unemployment relief. Some municipal relief is available, but is not commonly sought. It is a time honored custom to hide want. A stigma attaches to receipt of public doles of any kind. Self-help is the essence of self-respect in this country, and very few of the needy unemployed will register for municipal aid, which is not deemed sufficiently bountiful to offset the loss of caste."

France is now the most prosperous country in Europe, and for many years there has been less poverty there than in either England or the continental nations. As a traveler in France, I do not recall having ever seen neglected children as in other countries. It is true that French families are small, but apparently they make up in quality what they lack in quantity. F. C.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—John C. Pearl of Kentucky states in a letter to this department that Transylvania college was "the first college west of the Allegheny mountains."

Washington college, in Tennessee, was chartered as a college in 1795, three years before Transylvania college was chartered as a college, in 1798.

If the age of a college, however, is to be reckoned from the year in which the instruction of students began in an academy which developed into a college, Washington college is five years older than Transylvania. Instruction of students began in 1780 at the academy which developed into Washington college; in 1785 the first teacher was employed for instruction at the academy which developed into Transylvania college.

While, as Mr. Pearl stated in his letter, the Virginia assembly in 1780 donated certain escheated lands in Transylvania "for the purpose of public education," the date of this act cannot be accepted as the date of the establishment of the academy which developed into Transylvania college. If this method of determining the age of an institution be adopted, then Washington college was founded certainly as early as 1771, there being conclusive evidence that the Tennessee pioneers had made definite provision for the establishment of the college as early as that date.

Tusculum college, in Tennessee, was chartered as a college in 1794, one year before Washington college was chartered as a college; but Tusculum had no academic stage in its development and was not established until many years after Washington college was turning out graduates. Moreover, Dr. Doak, the founder of Washington college and a graduate of Princeton college, whom the National Cyclopedia of American Biography calls "apostle of learning and religion in the west," gave collegiate instruction in the school founded by him for fourteen years before it was chartered as a college.

Washington college, named in honor of George Washington, is unquestionably the oldest college west of the Alleghenies and was for many years "the principal seat of learning in the west." After considering the evidence, Roosevelt in his "The Winning of the West" refers to Washington college as the "first institution of its kind west of the Alleghenies," and the Americana Encyclopedia states that Washington college was "the first institution of higher learning west of the Allegheny mountains."

Washington college is located at the very spot where it was founded by Dr. Doak in 1780 and is still doing a most noble work. ERNEST BRADSHAW.

AMERICAN GIRL HELD IN CELL AS FOE OF FASCISM

Freed as Italian Guards Find They Erred.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Miss Gertrude Pulscher of Jamestown, N. D., has just returned to Paris after spending 8 hours in a cold jail cell at Bardonnia, an Italian frontier station. She was the victim of a recent intensive search for a romantically inclined American woman and other woman friends of anti-Fascists who are suspected of aiding and abetting the machinations of their Italian boy friends.

Realizing their error, the Italians released Miss Pulscher and permitted her to proceed to Paris after protests by herself and members of her party of 40 pupils of the New York School of Fine Arts—including Bernice Van Dorp of New York, Roy Nelson of New Haven, Conn., and John Graham of Rome, Ga.

Chicago Woman Involved.

It is learned that recent Fascist decisions was partly due to the activities of the wife of a Chicago man, who recently asked Italian anti-Fascist headquarters in Paris to do their utmost to help obtain her boy friend's release from a prison down below the border.

The party of American art students to which Miss Pulscher belonged was merely making a usual ten weeks' summer trip. Two weeks ago, at Nabona, the tourists first noticed that they were being shadowed. Twice Miss Pulscher was asked by hotel managements to show her passport. She was allowed to Pompeii and into museums and galleries by male and female detectives. Asking the hotel proprietor why she was being followed, Miss Pulscher was told that the police were asking for some one answering her description who was wanted for a political offense.

Detectives followed the party, except for Graham, who had stayed behind in Naples, as they traveled to Turin and ordered them off the train at Bardonnechia at the entrance of the Mont Cenis tunnel on the French border. The women were ordered to remove their clothing and were searched by female agents. Their luggage was also searched. Miss Pulscher was marched off to jail escorted by a squad of plumed soldiers.

Kept in Cold Cell.

The friends were given permission to proceed, but they remained because they were not willing to desert her. They telegraphed the American consul at Genoa, but received no aid. It is believed that their dispatch was held up.

Miss Pulscher charges she was kept in a frigidly cold jail cell. She said she was unable to sleep and was forced to run her cell to keep warm. She insists she was never questioned and was not told why she was arrested. She was released without a word of explanation at 11 p. m. on Sunday and permitted to proceed to Paris with her party.

The New York School of Fine Arts, which sends its pupils into Italy every summer on a ten weeks' trip, has also entered a protest with the Italian authorities.

Fishing Season Opens in Washington Park Lagoon

The fishing season opened yesterday in Washington park. The lagoon was stocked with 25,000 fish last autumn, according to Harry S. Richards, superintendent of maintenance. The season will last through October if fishing weather holds out that long, the south park commissioners announced. Fishing is only from rowboats. Hours are from 5 a. m. to 10 p. m.

SEARCH N. Y. FOR OUTLAW RUSSIAN WIRELESS PLANT

Radio Messages to Soviet Intercepted.

New York, Sept. 18.—[Special.]—An outlaw radio station, somewhere in New York City, has been in communication with soviet Russia for several months, it was learned today, and the police and federal authorities are conducting an investigation to locate the place exactly and to discover its ownership.

This announcement came today from high authority at police headquarters. At the same time it was reported from Washington that the government plans to bring prosecution in the federal District court in New York against the Russian station and another outlaw company which is believed to be directing the operations of a Japanese narcotic ring.

Hunted Several Months.

The existence of the soviet station has been known to the police for several months, it was learned, and its messages have been intercepted. They have been turned over to agents of the federal government for decoding, but whether the code has been solved could not be learned here.

Federal radio experts, it was stated, have been working with the police here in attempting to locate the soviet station. Some time ago the source of the messages was traced to a midtown building, but when detectives raided the plant the apparatus had been removed elsewhere.

Still in Operation.

The station, according to a high police official, still is in operation, and its messages still are being intercepted by the government.

$15,000 BOND FOR PROFESSOR ACCUSED OF DROWNING WIFE

Hampton, Va., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Elisha Kent Kane, University of Tennessee professor, charged with drowning his wife in Chesapeake bay, tonight looked forward to release from the Hampton jail tomorrow under bond of $15,000.

ELISHA KENT KANE [Acme Photo.]

Judge C. Vernon Spratley fixed the bond today, after the commonwealth had lost in an effort to have it set at $100,000, and a preliminary trial was called for Sept. 23 before Police Justice J. E. Dixon of Elisabeth City county. Kane will not waive preliminary hearing.

Meanwhile authorities sought the writer of a letter to Kane which W. C. Graham, father of the dead woman, said had caused her "great unhappiness."

The letter, written Sept. 1 from the liner America, signed "Betty" and with the return address "E. H. D., 150 Riverside drive, New York," on the back, bore the salutation "Dear Sashy," and was looked to by the coroner to provide a motive for homicide.

He said he believed its author was named Betty Dodd, but officers, apparently, had not been able to confirm this. The New York address given was a hotel where "Betty Dodd" was unknown.

Improvement Reported in Condition of L. E. Myers

The condition of Lewis E. Myers, president of the school board, was so much improved last night that he expected to leave this afternoon for his home at Lake Geneva. Mr. Myers has been under the care of a physician and two nurses in his apartment at the Blackstone hotel since Wednesday when a collapse sent him to bed.

U. S. CLERK GETS REPRIMAND ON SOVIET ARTICLE

Criticizes Trade Methods of Russians.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—For the second time within the space of three months the department of commerce has taken disciplinary action against an official or employé who broke into the public prints in a way displeasing to officials in charge. The latest individual to feel the displeasure of the department is G. L. Pass, a $1,400 clerk in the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. He has been reprimanded for writing an article criticizing the trade practices of soviet Russia.

Another Forced Out.

A short time ago more drastic action was taken against George Jackson Eder, chief of the Latin American section. He was forced out of the department following the publication of an article signed by him which criticized the prince of Wales' good will trip to South America as "a commercial flop."

In his article, which appeared in the United States Daily on Sept. 12, Mr. Pass said that American firms are wise who say "cash with order, no credit, and no goods in exchange."

"Russia," he said, "well understands how to take advantage of an economic depression which is local or confined to a definite area by playing a firm in one country against those in another in order to beat down prices and obtain larger credit for future orders."

"The various branches," he said, "established throughout the world by the soviet government, force the sale of Russian goods, and when this cannot be done, they attempt to exchange their goods for merchandise or machinery to be manufactured for her. If this procedure fails, then the manufacturer is requested to accept commercial paper for goods delivered. As there is no assurance that these bills will ever be met at maturity they are, however, disposed of to various banks with recourse to the manufacturer.

"In other words the American manufacturer takes the commercial paper and guarantees payment by his firm in order to dispose of it on the market, thus backing Russian business with American capital."

LABOR DEMANDS STATE PREVENT BANK FAILURES

Insists Upon Safety for Workers' Savings.

Galesburg, Ill., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Immediate revision of state banking laws as a means of averting further failures was recommended by delegates at the 49th annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor here today.

"The whole business of banking must be removed from political influence or control and the word 'bank' made to stand for unquestioned security," it was stated in the committee report which was adopted. Urging that means be found to prevent bank officials from speculating and gambling with money entrusted to their care, the report declared that the "state auditor's first and last duty must be to prevent bankers from either honestly or dishonestly allowing any state bank whatsoever to become insolvent. Unless our savings are adequately safeguarded by the state our government is woefully lacking in responsibility."

Ask Aid for Chicago Schools.

An appeal for a special session of the legislature to consider ways of relieving the Chicago school situation was made by the convention. Resolutions adopted unanimously urged the legislature to "remedy the breakdown of tax assessment and lack of education revenue in Cook county" and to furnish immediate cash for running the schools, using a bond issue if necessary. Portable schools were condemned as "unsanitary and uncomfortable shacks" and an intensive construction program to provide proper building facilities was urged.

Indorse Municipal Colleges.

A resolution urging legalization of the college as a part of the public educational system was indorsed. The federation was told that this bill providing for municipal colleges is to appear at the next session of the legislature, and it was unanimously voted to support it as a means of providing a higher education for poor children unable to find the means to live on university campuses.

PLAN TO INSURE WORKMEN WINS PRAISE OF WOLL

Boston, Mass., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, told the International Typographical union convention today that Gerald Swope's insurance scheme for workers was one of the bright spots in "the darkest period in the history of American industry."

"The responsibility for a social breakdown, if it comes," Woll said, "is on the industrialists, not on the people of this country. We now find that men who have always before looked upon labor as a servant have come to realize that organized labor as represented by the American Federation of Labor is the the bulwark that has prevented the country going bankrupt."

Woll, while approving the five day week, said his frank advice to the typographical union was to go slow, because "a fight for it would mean the losing of a number of shops and an attempt to lower wages, a situation we have been able to prevent so far."

ELOPER ARRESTED

Mrs. Lucy Horwitz, wife of Chicago lawyer, arrested in St. Louis with J. W. McCabe, Chicago riding master, in custody of St. Louis detective at police headquarters in Missouri town.

McCABE BROUGHT BACK; RUNAWAY WIFE FORGIVEN

J. W. [Mike] McCabe, riding master, who was arrested in a St. Louis hotel Thursday after a brief elopement with Mrs. Lucy Horwitz, young mother of three children, was locked up in the Niles Center police jail early this morning.

Mrs. Horwitz, wife of Attorney Jacob W. Horwitz of 520 Stratford place, who started towards Chicago at the same time that McCabe started, stopped overnight at Peoria with her husband. She was described as being too ill to continue the journey. Attorney Horwitz and Capt. Robert Bowman of Niles Center remained with her. Horwitz has indicated he has forgiven his wife.

McCabe, a riding master at an academy near Evanston, eloped last Sunday with Mrs. Horwitz, leaving his wife and two children behind. Warrants were taken out against the elopers by Horwitz and Mrs. McCabe. The couple was traced to St. Louis, arrested, and started for home by automobile. At no time were the two together on the return trip.

YOUNG'S GROUP PLANS DRIVE AS SPUR TO RELIEF

Nation-Wide Campaign to Be Conducted.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Owen D. Young, chairman of the committee on mobilization of relief resources of the President's unemployment organization, today announced plans for a nation-wide drive to stimulate local relief organizations in their campaigns to raise sufficient funds to care for all unemployment distress that develops in their communities this winter.

OWEN D. YOUNG.

According to the New York financier, his committee of nationally known bankers, industrialists, and business men will utilize the radio, newspapers, periodicals, the motion picture industry, national church organizations, and advertising organizations to arouse the nation to the need of contributing liberally, so that unemployment distress can be handled locally.

Other Plans Welcomed.

Mr. Young expressed confidence that state, municipal, and private resources would be able to cope with unemployment distress during the coming winter. At the same time, however, he left the door open for consideration of other relief programs which might involve the expenditure of federal funds.

"I think you can say that no one will be allowed to starve this winter," Mr. Young said when pressed for information as to whether the President's organization contemplated calling upon the United States treasury for help in event local relief agencies fell down. "What that implies, I do not know, but I have every reason to believe that the states and municipalities and private agencies will supply sufficient funds. There will be no suffering."

Program Is Outlined.

At a meeting today Mr. Young described briefly the scope of the committee's work and Walter S. Gifford, chairman of the President's organization, described the manner in which this and other national committees will coöperate.

At the same time the committee members described to each other conditions in their own sections of the country and outlined relief needs as they now appear, with the reservation that conditions may change radically within the next several weeks before cold weather sets in.

MURDER VERDICT RETURNED.

A verdict of murder by persons unknown was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury investigating the death of Matthew Lampert, 46 years old, 1401 South 50th court, Cicero. He was found beaten to death in front of his garage at 5806 Roosevelt road.

SHRINERS PLAN EVENTS TO AID JOBLESS RELIEF

Entertainments Will Help Committee.

Proceeds from the fall and winter entertainments held by the Shriners at Medinah temple will be turned over to the joint emergency relief fund of Cook county, Dr. Ralph H. Wheeler, illustrious potentate, announced yesterday. The fund directors seek $8,800,000 for relief during the winter months.

The Shrine entertainments have been held heretofore without charge but will ask admission this year and they will be thrown open to the public. The entire proceeds will be given to the commission.

Asks Members to Help.

"Medinah's position in the civic life of Chicago makes it imperative that we help," said Dr. Wheeler in a special message to the 23,000 members of the temple. "The many gifted artists in our membership enable us to do this and at the same time enhance the activities of the temple. To further this and materially help the unemployment situation, Medinah will bear all the expense of the coming events and give the entire proceeds from the sale of tickets to charity.

"We are sponsoring the entertainments—heretofore given free—on a paid admission basis. Our fellow artists will give freely of their talents and we need only your support and coöperation to make this program a complete success."

The first entertainment will be given Thursday night and features the Medinah brass band under the direction of Paul Donnelley, assisted by several soloists. Other benefits will be held from then on through January.

No Free List.

In announcing the plan, Dr. Wheeler emphasized that 100 per cent of the receipts will be given to the relief fund. "There will be no free list," he said. "The fact that any person is in the temple on any or all the entertainment dates, including the officers of the temple, the members and workers, will be proof that he or she has purchased an admission."

Another relief effort went forward yesterday, members of the Children's Aid society reminding school children of the Thanksgiving collection which is taken each year to provide food and clothing for destitute children.

GOV. ROOSEVELT AND REPUBLICANS AGREE ON RELIEF

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 19 (Saturday).—[Special.]—All outstanding differences between Gov. Roosevelt and the Republican majority in the legislature over unemployment relief legislation were removed at a conference which ended at 2 o'clock this morning.

The Wicks bill, amended so as to be acceptable to both sides, will be passed by the senate and assembly under an emergency message from the governor when the legislature meets later in the day. The extraordinary session will come to an end in the afternoon.

The Republicans yielded on two points and Gov. Roosevelt on one. The Republican concessions involved removal of the prospective commission to be appointed by the governor to administer the $20,000,000 relief fund from the state department of social welfare and providing for its functioning as a wholly free and independent temporary agency of the state government.

Scotty Allan Mostly Tells Story of Dogs

With Only a Little on Men and Gold.

BY AL CHASE.

"Gold, Men and Dogs" [Putnam], the strenuous autobiography of A. A. [Scotty] Allan, might better have been called "Dogs, Men and Gold," for all of the heroes and a few of the villains are canines, and the men and gold merely fill in the romantic frontier background of this absorbing book.

Scotty, of course, arrived on this old world via Scotland, but came to America when a youngster in charge of a horse. He helped in the construction of the Great Northern railroad, becoming a good friend of James J. Hill.

And then the Klondike was discovered and Scotty joined in the frantic rush for gold. He reached Dawson City after months of thrills, only to discover after several bitter disappointments that he could make gold faster by working at such a humdrum thing as teaming with huskies and horses than he could by mining.

Scotty loved dogs more than he did gold and he capitalized this fondness by making several fortunes [and later losing most of them] in raising, driving and racing them. His real rise to fame came when he originated the Alaska sweepstakes, a dog race of over four hundred miles, thrice won by him and his huskies. This spectacular arctic contest became internationally famous and Scotty and his dogs were its heroes.

In 1915 he was commissioned by the French government to take over to the war front a pack of dogs and his experience in carrying this out is one of the most compelling chapters in the book.

Of course, a man with the knowledge of dogs that Scotty possesses should pass it on. This he does in chapters on their care and training.

"Gold, Men and Dogs" is more like an adventure tale than an autobiography. It's crowded with colorful incident, packed with thrills and told with a vigor and sincerity that make it one of the most readable books of its kind published in many months.

Gossip of British Authors

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—One by one the Victorian authors are being rediscovered. A few months ago we had a book on Charles Reade; and now there is a new biography of Henry Kingsley, brother of Charles Kingsley, and author of "Ravenshoe" and "Geoffrey Hamlyn." The author is Mr. S. M. Ellis, who, although his literary style is not of the most vivid, deserves warm thanks for his contributions to literary biography. He gave us the monumental book on Harrison Ainsworth just before the war; and he since has told the life story of G. P. R. James. In Henry Kingsley he has a good subject, for not only was Kingsley's life interesting, but his books still have, in the publishing sense, life. It is to be noted that the slaughter of the Victorians by the clever generation of youngish moderns has ceased. The biographies now being written and published are in another vein. They seek to tell the truth; they do not seek to establish the author's reputation for wit. It is a sign of the times.

An important omnibus book shortly to appear is the "Outline of Modern Knowledge," which Mr. Gollancz promises in one volume of a thousand pages. Each department has been in the hands of an expert, and no better contributor on the subject of "The Principles of Literary Criticism" could have been found than Lascelles Abercrombie. Mr. Abercrombie first attracted notice in the first decade of this century by publishing on his own account certain volumes of poetry. He then wrote a remarkable, and still unsurpassed, study of the work of Thomas Hardy.

Since that time he has been professor of English literature, first in the universities of Liverpool and Leeds and now at London university; and he has published various books dealing with esthetic theory. His collected poems have been included in the Oxford Poets—an altogether exceptional honor, since no living poet, other than Robert Bridges, when he was poet laureate, has ever been so distinguished.

In connection with Thomas Hardy, Mr. Abercrombie himself tells how he was once in Dorchester, and, as he was so near the object of his admiration, he ventured to visit Max Gate, to call upon Mr. Hardy without an introduction. He was admitted to the house, Hardy consented to see him, the two met and conversed. After what seemed to Mr. Abercrombie a long interview [so shy were they both] he took his leave. Then, consulting his watch, Mr. Abercrombie found that the whole encounter had lasted exactly three minutes.

Rockwell Kent's Daughter Shares Her Birthday Gift

Random House has just published the "Rockwell Kent Birthday Book" in an edition of 1,350 copies, each signed by Mr. Kent. The book is printed in two colors, bound in silk. It is a fairy tale composed by Rockwell Kent, and is intended for young ladies from the ages of 1 to 15. The last page of each copy has a space on which the name of the recipient is to be inscribed. Kent wrote the story for his own daughter's birthday. She has just refused an offer of $1,500 for the original set of drawings.

Englishwoman Member of Foreign Legion—Wren

The legend that an Englishwoman fought and served in the French foreign legion has apparently been authenticated by Maj. P. C. Wren, author of "Beau Geste," whose new book, "Sowing Glory" [Stokes], is nothing else than the edited diary and memoirs of "Mary Ambree," who entered the foreign legion and served in it for five years after having driven a Red Cross ambulance in the world war.

Heroes of England Depicted in Pocket Sized Book

A suave, deftly written little volume is "The English Adventurers" by Clennell Wilkinson [Longmans], the latest edition to "The English Heritage Series," edited by Viscount Lee of Fareham and J. C. Squire. Although it's pocket size, it has more information than the average full size book. It has a chapter on the crusaders, one on the free companions, and one about Hakluyt's heroes. It tells of Francis Drake, the buccaneers, the great navigators in the south, and there's a chapter on privateers and soldiers of fortune. It touches briefly and with sly humor on "letting light into Africa" and also outlines polar exploration. It's a dashing little book, full of thrills and told with charming humor.

Behavior Problems of So-Called Human Race

"The Pleasures of the Torture Chamber," by John Swain, illustrated in collotype, with head and tail pieces in line, published by the Dial Press. It is a history of a man's cruelty to man throughout the ages, written in a sardonic fashion that leaves no doubt as to the author's conviction that what man has done once he may do again. It is a testament of atrocity committed in the name of religion and justice. The author has made a thorough study of his amazing subject and quotes liberally from his authorities. The illustrations are drawn from the "Book of Martyrs" and other sources.

First Wife of Sinclair Lewis Writes Novel

Well Written, She Fails as the Heroine.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Half a Loaf," by Grace Hegger Lewis. (Liveright.) Published yesterday.

GRACE HEGGER LEWIS is the divorced wife of Sinclair Lewis, the winner of the Nobel prize for literature in 1930. Before reading "Half a Loaf" that is the most significant fact about the book—that its author was the former wife of a great novelist, one who has had almost incomparable international fame. For the book has been said, ever since its conception, to be the thinly veiled story of the married life of that novelist. An avid world has awaited what it undoubtedly hoped would be at the same time an apologia and a bit of scandal. I doubt if any one expected the book to have any literary merit or to be anything but a vicious and ill-advised attack on a man who is always good copy for the newspapers no matter what he says or does.

GRACE HEGGER LEWIS.

The book is, therefore, a great surprise. For it is primarily an excellent novel, a living, vivid picture of married life that somehow didn't exactly go, and a keen understanding of a writer's psychology which is essentially remote even when it is plunged most deeply in the affairs of other men and other women. It is well written. It has vitality and understanding of the technique of novel-carpentering and of reality. The book has that indefinable thing that used to be called "It."

Unfortunately, however, "Half a Loaf" probably never will get a chance to be judged as a novel at all. It will be lucky if readers see any of the forest of its obvious excellent qualities for the trees of its disclosure of intimate details about the life of a famous man. As I remember, only twice in this generation have the wives of great novelists taken the public into their confidence as to their marital difficulties. Mrs. Arnold Bennett No. 1 and Mrs. Joseph Conrad, who was the sole incumbent of that name.

Mrs. Bennett's book was plainly vituperative, without literary quality at all. It probably would never have been printed except for its "scandal." Mrs. Conrad's was a rather wistful groping of a misunderstood wife writing about a misunderstood husband. It was a little sharp-tongued, but with enough of Conrad in it to be interesting to his admirers despite its obvious uniliterary quality.

Grace Hegger Lewis has written in "Half a Loaf" a novel which would be an interesting and impressive piece of fiction no matter about whom it was written. It is one that, if it did not bear the name of the former Mrs. Sinclair Lewis as author, would be looked on as an understanding estimate of marriage and the genus genius. But the question of taste will cloud all estimates of the book.

Whether it is in decent taste to disclose the most intimate actions and reactions of any ex-husband [or ex-wife] in such a manner that the blindest person could not mistake the originals of the characters, to use other characters with their actual names, like Galsworthy and Arnold Bennett and Wells and Walpole and Mencken, to disguise others so thinly as merely to point with certainty to their identity—that is indeed a nice question of literature.

"Half a Loaf" really is an autobiography of the author and a biography of Sinclair Lewis with the names changed to Suzie Brooke Hale and Timothy Hale. That is the only disguise which the author uses. Her picturization of her former husband is meticulously exact, down to the minutest detail. Any one who knew Sinclair Lewis in the days before his first marriage broke up will see him in every line which the author writes. She has even caught his whimsical phraseology.

Oddly enough, what she has done is not to make her hero any of the stock villains as ex-wives usually see their ex-husbands, a fiend or a reprobate or a drunkard or a philanderer, but a strangely childlike, eager soul. Only, he married the wrong woman and was driven to his philandering and his drinking and his pompousness not by a sudden success, but by the inhuman "snottiness" [as she elegantly calls it] of a wife who wouldn't let her husband, bring an old college chum home unannounced to dinner, who had delusions of grandeur, which drove all of his friends frantic, and who thought that he amounted to what he was only because she made him what he was.

The person who emerges from "Half a Loaf" as some one nobody could live with without wanting to do murder is not the hero but the heroine. And that through no false modesty of the author's.

The linen washed in public in "Half a Loaf" is not dirty linen at all, most of the time, but fragrant bridal linen, as it were. It is a very moving love story for most of its pages, the story of eager young adventurers in the world who beyond the luck of most found not only the rainbow but the pots of gold at its ends for many more years than from their beginnings and their temperaments might have seemed possible.

First Book Auction

The first auction of the season sponsored by the Chicago Book and Art Auctions, Inc., will be held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Fine Arts building. The sale offers selections from the libraries of Dr. Godfrey Koehler and the late Donald Robertson. The public exhibit will be held from noon today until the time of the sale. The Chicago Book and Art Auctions, Inc., is an organization of Chicago book collectors who hoped to make Chicago a center for the buying and selling of rare books, and who have succeeded proudly in their aims. It is an organization not for profit, as I understand it. Among the directors are Oliver R. Barrett, who has the finest collection of Lincolniana in the world [as well as an amazing amount of other unique volumes], and Dr. Otto L. Schmidt, former president of both the Illinois State Historical society and the Chicago Historical society.

Artist Is Slain in Good Style by This Author

"Suspicious Characters" Heads Present List.

BY SCHUYLER VAN VLEEK.

"Suspicious Characters," by Dorothy L. Sayers. [Brewer, Warren, and Putnam.]

"Set a Thief," by Lee Thayer. [Sears.]

"About 2 A. M.," by Charles Francis Coe. [Cosmopolitan.]

"The Lone Wolf's Son," by Louis Joseph Vance. [Lippincott.]

In spite of the fact that obliging authors have been sitting up nights, trying to outwit their readers, endeavoring to turn out mystery stories that keep you guessing or your money back, remarkably few detective stories have any style whatsoever. They are intent, first and foremost, on the crime and its solution. The words in which the tale is told tumble out, willy-nilly, regardless of the faintest attempt at literary merit.

DOROTHY L. SAYERS.

Therefore, it is with the utmost jubilation that the seeker after the well written as well as the thrilling mystery pounces upon such a book as "Suspicious Characters," by Dorothy L. Sayers.

Her story is told with skill. It is enhanced by a perfectly delightful sense of humor and will interest you simply from the literary point of view, if from no other.

The locale is Scotland—Galloway, to be exact—where one either fished or painted, or both. Among the little colony of artists there is one brush wielder who is heartily disliked by most of the group for his surliness, his sarcasm and his brutish ways. When, one morning, he is found murdered, his body half submerged in a stream at the foot of a steep and rocky incline, no one sheds any tears or writes a eulogy.

The guilty man, or public benefactor, as you will, must, however, be found to satisfy the law. So the hunt starts. Lord Peter Wimsey sets to work and, although red herrings and blind alleys abound, he weeds out the false evidences and leads the police slowly but surely directly to the murderer.

Another mystery that has a style of its own is "Set a Thief," by Lee Thayer. Peter Clancy, the brain child of the author, who has appeared in his other books, is again the chief sleuth. With the help of his valet, the British Wiggar, who impersonates a member of the nobility [and, of course, who should know a lord better than his own valet?], Mr. Clancy works out the conundrum of necklace, necklace, who's got the necklace, in this amusing and clever tale.

Number three in our row, "About 2 A. M.," isn't nearly so well told a story as the others mentioned. The author has a good plot, too, and he is a deft hand at describing the weather. The long rain and ice storm is so vividly pictured that one can almost feel the cold. But Mr. Coe is not so adept at drawing his characters for us. Lemuel Tobias Bekins, "the master investigator," is completely ruined because of overemphasis on his peculiar diction. He appears sophomoric.

The story moves too slowly, too. And there is a decided let down feeling at the end. Mr. Coe is out of his element in this book. He should stick to his metier—the telling of gangster stories. His knowledge of gang leaders and crime conditions made "Me Gangster," "The River Pirate," and "The Other Half" instant successes. There was an authentic ring to everything he said. But in "About 2 A. M." an entirely different scene is depicted, one that lacks reality.

Following closely on the still potent scent of the many brain twisting mysteries of Louis Joseph Vance comes "The Lone Wolf's Son." It deals with the famous criminal of former tales and the long lost son, whose skill is equal to that of the father. The story is all about some very costly emeralds and some imitations as they travel in and out of the owner's hands across the Atlantic on a de luxe liner.

Almost all the characters are very expensive appearing people and on the surface present themselves as reputable cosmopolites. But that is a delusion, for it is in this manner, generally, that the deadliest criminals operate today.

These people represent a gang in New York that controls all rackets. "The Lone Wolf's Son" is an exciting tale of those who try to operate against the gang, and pictures about everything known in the more sophisticated circles of gangdom. If you have close at hand a box containing more than the prerequisite few grains of salt that must go with a thriller of this sort, you will like it very much.

Will James Says Cowboy Will Last for Some Time

"Sun-Up," by Will James, which Scribners recently published, is a collection of some of his best stories. Three are new and never have been in book form before. In a preface, written in his own hand and adorned with two drawings, Will James remarks: "Tin and bolts is about all most folks get to see now." But he concludes on a more optimistic note: "It took two generations to make the cowboy and it will take many more to lose him."

... from the black-robed Marquette, dying beside the sluggish river of old Chicago . . . to the gangster shot down in the shadow of the Cathedral that proclaims Marquette's faith . . ."

"Chicago is the heroine of 'Lake Front.' It is the record of her life to date, not told as it has been told in the narration of events which made her what she is today, but set down in flicker shots of pictures in her life and history . . . the author has created a background that is so much more impressive than any of the figures that move in the foreground that the reader has little interest or concern with anything but that swiftly moving picture of a swiftly, almost miraculously developing city, and its psychological and physical aspects."
FANNY BUTCHER,
Chicago Tribune

"Place and time are the twin heroes of this novel; the characters important chiefly as registering the changing moods of the city . . . Chicago is a big city and deserves a big novel . . . in 'Lake Front,' an outstanding piece of writing, Miss Russell has made excellent use of her great opportunity and a stout bid toward its fulfillment."

To the Man Who Knows Its Origin Every Word Presents a Picture

Congregation

The symbolism so beautifully expressed in David's Twenty-third Psalm is fully justified by the origins of our words congregation and pastor.

The Latin word grex, gregis, means "flock" or "herd" and is the basis for the word congregare meaning "to collect into a flock." From this source comes the Latin word congregatio, and in turn, our own word congregation, which, therefore, goes back to the original meaning, "a flock of sheep." The word pastor carries out the same symbolism. Latin pascere, pastum, means "to pasture," "to feed." From this word comes Latin pastor, "a shepherd" or "one who has the care of flocks." The same word in English means "a keeper of souls" or "minister of a church." The two words, therefore, preserve the symbolism of the shepherd and his flock as applied to the pastor and his congregation.

Not only do these word stories make the most interesting reading, but to know them will give you an effectiveness in speaking and writing that can come in no other way. FREE EXAMINATION

Without paying a cent, you may enter your subscription and receive for free examination the two September selections: The new book is ALBERT GROPE by F. O. Mann. It is the deeply human life story of a simple, friendly Londoner, born in poverty, who makes his own way to prosperity and happiness. There are so many delightful characters in the book, so much that is droll, or touching, or dramatic, and the whole story is so intensely real, that you are certain to find it irresistible.
The classic for September is Leonid Andreyev's famous masterpiece, THE SEVEN THAT WERE HANGED, an immortal drama that is Russian realism pure and unadulterated. It is the story of seven condemned men and women whose souls are stripped bare during the seventeen days before their midnight execution. The volume also contains The Red Laugh another of Andreyev's grim and powerful tales.

'30 Census Shows Slight Increase in Acreage.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Political agitators who have been picturing middle west farms as overburdened with mortgages were given a jolt yesterday when 1930 farm census figures for Illinois were made public by the federal census bureau in Washington, D. C.

The preliminary tabulations disclose that the mortgage debt on Illinois farm land and buildings in 1930 was only 43.81 per cent, compared with 40.79 per cent in 1925, an increase of only 3 per cent in the five years.

The report shows that the Illinois farmer's expenditures for feed and fertilizer increased in 1929 as compared with the census estimates of 1924 and 1919, while his expenses for farm labor, exclusive of housework, diminished.

214,497 Farms Reported.

There were 214,497 farms reported in the 1930 census, compared with 225,601 in 1925 and 237,181 in 1920. The value of farm property in this latest census was placed at $3,789,944,109, compared with $4,627,964,933 in 1925 and $6,866,767,235 in 1920 when land prices were at the peak.

Of the 119,892 Illinois farms operated by owners, 49,459 were reported as mortgaged in the 1930 census. The value of land and buildings on these resident owned farms was placed at $454,763,994 in the 1930 census, compared to $535,833,037 in 1925. There were 3,940,740 acres of land in farms in 1930, as compared to 3,848,741 acres in 1925, showing a slight increase in the acreage, even though the total number of farms was decreasing.

The mortgage debt in 1930 totaled $199,229,141, compared with a mortgage debt of $218,543,788 in 1925.

Tractors and Autos Increase.

The census report shows that more automobiles, motor trucks, and tractors have been added to Illinois' farming business, and that telephones, water piping, and electric lighting are increasing. There were 192,873 autos owned on 170,606 farms in the state in 1930, as compared with 139,090 on 125,586 farms in 1920. Where in 1920 there were 6,154 trucks on 5,907 farms, the latest census shows 38,877 farms reporting 40,371 trucks. Twenty-one thousand farms had 23,000 tractors in 1930, while in 1930 there were 69,628 tractors on 66,000 farms.

There were 147,672 farms reporting telephones, the 1930 census showed.

TWO STUDENTS ARE DROWNED IN LAKE RESCUE

Ralph Mills Harned, 20 years old, a dental student at Northwestern university, and Hugh Kelley of Thomaston, Ga., a theological student at Bethel college, Hopkinsville, Ky., were drowned on Monday in Morris lake at Hopkinsville, it was learned last night.

They lost their lives after they had assisted in rescuing eight other members of a boating party who were thrown into the lake when their launch overturned during a storm. The party was given by Miss Marion Gaines, daughter of the president of Bethel college. Harned was a guest of the college president.

Harned was buried at Hopkinsville on Wednesday. He was a brother of Dr. John W. Harned, 1400 Lake Shore drive, a member of the faculty of the University of Illinois, and resided with him.

SCRAPPY BLONDE ADMITS ROBBING NEARLY 100 MEN

A tough blonde gunwoman was arrested late last night at Ohio and Dearborn streets as she was preparing, according to her confession later, to rob a victim. She identified herself as Margaret Sherman, and said she lived at 3451 West Monroe street.

MARGARET SHERMAN.

She was seen by Sergt. Harry Penzin and his squad of the East Chicago avenue station as she accosted Viggo Windfeldt, 23 years old, of 1144 North Kedvale avenue. The policemen, on vice as well as routine detail, halted and searched her. They found a loaded .38 caliber revolver concealed in her dress.

Margaret was taken to the station. She admitted she meant to lure Windfeldt to her room and rob him. Altogether, she said, she has held up nearly 100 men in this fashion.

"WHAT-A-MAN" WINS DIVORCE; TO REWED MA

Las Vegas, Nev., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Guy Edward Hudson was granted a divorce here this afternoon from Mrs. L. Margaret Newton Hudson, and less than half an hour later obtained a license to marry Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy. The marriage will not take place before Sunday, it was said tonight.

Hudson went through a marriage ceremony with Mrs. Kennedy, mother of Aimee McPherson Hutton, Los Angeles evangelist, a few months ago, in Long View, Wash. After a brief honeymoon Mrs. Kennedy obtained an annulment of the marriage, saying she took the action after learning of the existence of Mrs. Newton Hudson.

In his successful divorce action here today Hudson charged cruelty. He was married to Mrs. Newton here in November, 1929.

He said his wife held too many parties. When he came home tired there was always a party or his wife had arranged for them to go out to one, he explained.

He also told of his wife's attitude toward a former husband.

"We were sitting peacefully at home one evening," testified Hudson, "when my wife looked out of the window and exclaimed: 'My, there's my husband.' He came in and I went out. She told me she never wanted to see me again."

Hudson said she since had claimed a Central or South American divorce.

CHARITY TO GET $475,000 ESTATE OF C. M. O'FARRELL

Catholic charities will eventually receive the major portion of the $475,000 estate of Charles M. O'Farrell, director of Carson Pirie Scott & Co., who died June 26, it was disclosed yesterday by his will, admitted to probate by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner.

After payment immediately of bequests totaling $60,000 to a dozen Catholic charities and the Salvation Army and of $5,000 each to eight cousins of Mr. O'Farrell living in Carlow, Newtonbarry and Dublin, Ireland, the residual estate will be held in trust for the widow, Mrs. Mary J. O'Farrell, 1032 Loyola avenue.

At her death the will directs that the estate be divided into forty-five equal parts. The Christian Brothers school at Carlow, Ireland, St. Vincent's orphanage and Loyola university will each receive eighteen of these fractions, and the remainder will be divided among other charities.

Youth Caught by Police Two Minutes After Holdup

Robert Nielson, 17 years old, who specialized in robbing chain stores and filling stations, was arrested late last night by a detective squad less than two minutes after he had held up Ernest Tetzold, a butched at 5308 Irving Park boulevard, and locked him in an icebox. Nielson took $50 and fled. Tetzold yelled for help and his cries were heard by neighbors, who notified the squad of Sergt. Andrew Kruezer.

FUNERAL RITES FOR C. A. CARLSON WILL BE TODAY

Funeral services for Carl August Carlson, former Chicago banker and head of the building contractor's firm bearing his name at 749 Irving Park boulevard, who died Wednesday at his home, 2729 Sheridan road, Evanston, will be held at 1:30 p. m. today from the residence. Interment will be at the Mount Olive cemtery. Mr. Carlson was 59 years old.

Born in Sweden, Mr. Carlson came to this country when he was 18 years old. In 1924 Mr. Carlson was elected president of the Irving State bank, which merged a year ago with the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank, since closed.

Mr. Carlson served twice as a lay delegate to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, and was president of the Swedish Methodist Aid society. He was a member of the board of directors of the Swedish Methodist Old People's home, treasurer of the Swedish Theological seminary, and on the board of the home missions and church extensions of the Methodist general council.

Mr. Carlson is survived by his widow, Dora; one son, Raymond, and three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, Helen and Jane Carlson.

TWO ROB GASOLINE STATION.

COL. ZACK MULHALL OF WILD WEST FAME AND RANCHER, DEAD

ZACK MULHALL.

Mulhall was orphaned at an early age. He attended Notre Dame university and obtained his first jobs working on cattle ferryboats on the St. Louis water front. He came to old Oklahoma Territory in 1889 to find the cow ranch he'd dreamed of near the present site of Mulhall.

During the Louisiana Purchase exposition in St. Louis he entered the wild west show field. His daughter, Lucille, trouped with him and his show appeared at Madison Square Garden in New York several years. There he took Will Rogers, later to become famous as Oklahoma's cowboy humorist.

SERRITELLA AND HOCHSTEIN GET SEPARATE TRIALS

State Senator Daniel Serritella, Capone lieutenant and city sealer under the last city administration, and Harry Hochstein, his chief deputy, will be tried separately on an indictment charging them with conspiracy to defraud the public by wholesale connivance with short weighing merchants.

DAN SERRITELLA.

That was assured yesterday when Attorney Benedict J. Short presented a petition for change of venue on behalf of Hochstein before Judge John Prystalski in the Criminal court. The petition, signed by Sam Findall, 3415 Roosevelt road, and Sam Donn, 329 South Avers avenue, alleged that the judge was prejudiced against Hochstein.

Judge Prystalski had no recourse under the law except to send the Hochstein case to Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher for reassignment. Assistant State's Attorney Harold M. Keele refused to allow the case of Serritella to be transferred.

Playing With Fire

By WILLIAM MAC LEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Lee Reynolds is the owner of a ranch which drought has almost ruined. She leases a Mexican rancho and moves her starving herd there. She is barely settled when a revolution breaks out. Megares, bogey man of the border, is the leader. Ranse Brennan, a former foreman of Lee's, is his right hand man. Brennan was discharged by Lee and vows revenge. Lee hires a new hand, who is recognized by Dune Daggett, an old ranch hand of Jack Hadley, a millionaire oil man of California, whose father owned a mine on Lee's ranch and was murdered by outlaws. Hadley is searching for the murderer of his father. Hadley and Lee call on Megares, who is, apparently, friendly to them. Megares calls at the ranch and is infatuated with Lee's guest, Mrs. Doris Silver. He plans to live at the rancho, to protect them, he says, though they are really his prisoners. Doris is rescued by airplane by her husband. Lee refuses to leave her ranchers—and Jack Hadley, whom she loves. Harold Silver promises to return with an armed plane for Lee's rescue. Lee and Jack are sentenced by a drum court martial to be shot at sunset. Lee is spared by Megares when he tries to interfere in Lee's behalf. Megares grants Lee and Jack a final parting. Hadley outwits Megares and escapes with Lee.

INSTALLMENT XXX.

THE TABLES TURNED.

Sounds of a commotion within the house could be heard. Men were rushing to and fro. Voices were lifted in excitement.

Hadley needed no explanation. Megares had been found.

"You will go with us, Colonel," he said quickly. "If you try to escape I'll shoot you down. And if you betray us you'll go first. Move fast but don't run. But first I'll take your guns."

Pedro made no protest. He did exactly as he was told.

They reached the stable.

Jack slammed shut the door and in the darkness climbed up a flight of wooden stairs to a loft room. He bolted the door.

He went to the small window and looked out. He could hear a voice giving orders and could see soldiers moving forward. He dropped a bullet in front of them.

"I'll fire to kill next time," he shouted in Spanish.

The answer came from Megares in person. "For each one of my men you hit I'll shoot down a Lazy R vaquero. I'm going to get you, gringo dog, alive if possible."

Jack kissed her. He had no comfort to offer, except to remind her that he was to have been shot at sunset and yet was still alive.

From the grove of liveoaks a voice called. Once more Megares was speaking.

"I've got some of your friends here, Mr. Hadley. We're to have a little cattle party. The first one is an old fool named Daggett. Perhaps he would like to say a few words."

Dune Daggett said his few words, in a falsetto voice quavering with excitement. What he had to say was punctuated with blistering epithets applied to Megares.

"Don't let him bluff you, Jack, into giving up to him. Let him hang me, and be damned."

Jack's stomach turned sick. He could not let Dune Daggett and the other Lazy R riders die on his account. He had to pay his own debts.

"If I give up without a fight will you turn loose Daggett and the other Lazy R vaqueros?" he asked.

"Yes," Megares shouted back. "It's you I want."

"Is Col. Mancos there?"

"I'm here," some one answered.

"I'll surrender on one condition," Hadley called to him. "You and the other officers have got to swear that you'll protect Miss Reynolds from Megares just as though she were your own daughter."

To Jack's surprise Mancos did not hesitate an instant. "I'll protect her with my life. This thing has gone far enough. I don't make war on women and I don't take orders from those that do."

Megares gave a roar of rage, but Hadley went on with the roll call of the officers who had sat on the court martial. The others were far less discreet in their answers than Mancos, but they came through with promises of a sort.

"I'll surrender within five minutes," Hadley told them. "The other men are to be freed and Miss Reynolds to be protected. That's understood?" The officers assented.

"I won't have it, Jack. I won't have it," Lee cried, clinging to him in terror. "Don't you see it doesn't matter what happens to me if I lose you! I'll not let you go. I'll not."

He held her in his arms and spoke very gently. "It has to be, sweetheart. If I hold out and let them kill Dune I couldn't look you in the face. You must see that."

Even in his preoccupation Jack had been vaguely aware of a faint droning in the sky. Now it came unmistakably clear, the roar of an aeroplane above their heads. He and Lee stopped a moment to listen.

"It's Harold coming back," the girl cried.

The night woke to sudden noises. The sound of approaching automobiles, the roar of guns, the shouts and curses of men blended into the inferno of battle. Megares and his men were flying into the shadows.

A skirmish had been fought and won. Men had been killed, others captured. But with the egocentric urge of all human beings, the one important fact to the lovers in the loft room was that they had been saved. They were free to love and be loved. The menace that had hung so heavily over them had been driven off as smoke is by a gust of wind.

They clung to each other in an ecstasy of emotion.

"I am Capt. Gonzales, a nephew of Gen. Luna," he said by way of introduction. "I regret that the villain Megares has escaped after causing you so much distress."

"Let me thank you for your timely arrival, Captain, on behalf both of myself and Miss Reynolds, whom I take pleasure in presenting you to. My name is Hadley—Jack Hadley."

They shook hands.

"Though I am happy to have saved you, Mr. Hadley, I have failed in the most important part of my enterprise. I very much wanted to catch Megares and see him shot," the captain said. "My men are still after him, but in the dark night I don't think there is much chance of finding him."

Daggett chipped in. "That fellow Megares is sure enough one scalawag I'd like to see bumped off. Are you all right, Miss Lee?"

"I'm all right, Dune," Lee told him. "I expect my hair has turned white, but I can have it dyed." She turned to Gonzales. "I want to thank you too, Captain, for saving us. Mr. Hadley and I are engaged to be married, so you can guess how terribly unhappy and frightened I was."

The old foreman gave a whoop of delight. "Now you're sure enough shooting, you two. Dog my cats, if it ain't worth having a rope around my neck for a spell to hear that."

"I heard an airplane just as we got here," Gonzales said. "It landed somewhere near. I'm wondering if it is a rebel plane."

Hadley explained to the officer that they were rather expecting a plane from across the line to attempt a rescue and that probably this was the one. In a few sentences he sketched the story of their stay at the rancho and of the escape of Mrs. Silver and its consequences to those remaining.

The young Mexican summed up crisply. "The man's a murderous villain. For many years he has merited death. It would be a great pleasure for me to relieve the country of him."

They stopped talking, all of them, to listen to the sound of guns. It came from a distance of perhaps half a mile.

"My men must have made contact with some of the escaping rebels," Gonzales guessed. "I think I'll push on to them with reserves."

Half an hour later Gonzales and his men returned. With them were Harold Silver and three other Americans. A prisoner also was brought in by the party.

The plane had made a landing on the mesa by the light of the stars. It had been a precarious business, but by good luck there had not been a crash. But there had been plenty of excitement. Half a dozen of the rebels had attacked the party, evidently in the hope of taking off in the plane. Silver and his men had driven them back and captured the most persistent of the assailants.

Gonzales had the prisoner brought forward to the light. At sight of the man Lee gave a cry of surprise. He was Megares.

"You see I couldn't stay away from you, señorita," he said with an ironical bow. "I had to come back, knowing how you must be longing for me."

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

Strange and sad, amusing and wholly inveigling is "The Last Flight"—screenization of John Monk Saunders' story, "Nikki and Her War Birds." There's a vague, eerie, Alice-in-Wonderland-ish unreality about its biting reality which makes the picture different from anything seen before.

The story is mainly concerned with five young people—four youths and a girl, who, upon the conclusion of the world war, find themselves at loose ends. Not knowing what to do about it, they do the best they can with a gallantry and determination which leads them everywhere—and nowhere. Their lots thrown together, together they drift, drinking and singing and talking a nonsense language of their own creation.

You laugh with them and weep for them and understand a little better than you ever have before the tragedy of war's aftermath.

I have not seen a more touchingly intuitive piece of acting than Helen Chandler's portrayal of Nikki. You never learn who or what she was, or is. Only that she has a mother with whom she couldn't get along because she didn't like her name.

Of the men you know more—and I'll let the picture tell you about these fine boys—"jangled bells, out of tune. . . ." Poor darlings! The lot of them! If you've ever—or never—liked Richard Barthelmess, John Mack Brown, David Manners, and Elliott Nugent before—you'll take them to your hearts this trip. The man named Frink? O, a sort of a rotter of a journalist—and I guess war made HIM that way, too.

The action occurs here, there, and everywhere in Europe, immediately before, and after the armistice has been declared.

This film is heart moving and suspenseful. It is technically excellent and direction was intelligent and artistic. It inspires one to paean and prayer. The song in your heart is because the great struggle is over; the prayer—that WAR may forever vanish from the earth.

See you tomorrow!

Public Paying to Teach Duty of Perfect Host

How to Carve Is Among School Subjects.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

High school boys in Chicago, as well as girls, are being taught how to use their leisure time better, how to prepare food and buy clothing, and the proper manners for all occasions.

The home economics course for boys includes a study of adequate food, appropriate clothing, the family and personal budget, a study of homes, social life and leisure. Under social life comes "duties of a host, carving, and serving meat, table manners, and etiquette."

The relation of the home to the community and something of the duties of marriage are also included in this course. House planning and furnishing, plumbing, lighting, heating, and furniture. Under social customs are the following items:

"Table etiquette, to include prompt arrival, seating, use of napkin, order of silver, use of silver, method of eating certain foods.

"Table talk, to include contributing to pleasant atmosphere, no talking with food in mouth, avoiding arguments, teasing the children, no comments on food, likes or dislikes. Attitude toward elders. Social customs in public places.

"Introductions, accepting, and dramatizing. Correct dress at parties. Appropriate gifts for various occasions. Suggest that students make a list of good and bad manners, toleration of others being the basis of all. For example, do return all borrowed goods, don't chew gum, don't speak in superlatives.

"Leisure time at home. Entertaining friends, planning parties and menus. Suggested activity—girls to serve afternoon tea suitable for a bridge foursome. Reading good books. Lectures, concerts, church. Developing a hobby."

The girls who have been through all the preliminary training in dressmaking are led on to costume designing, a study of period costumes and present day American dress. They are taught perfect grooming, with suitability of line, color, and fabric to the individual. Types of figures are studied and selection of suitables ensembles for different uses, effects of color, shape of the face, shape of neckline, and modeling garments and hats. The clothing budget is analyzed, income levels and percentages of expenditures for food, rent, clothing, savings, and advancement.

"Household engineering" comes next, with a time or motion study of such activities as sweeping, dusting, dishwashing, and bed making. Minor repairs in the home are included, and the planning of routine activities. Health and home nursing, home care of the sick, something about diseases and the care of the infant and child are the final items in this course.

In this way the pupils are taken through the whole panorama of daily home life, with much observation and performance to test them on the way.

For many this is an admirable course, while for others it would be regarded as a "snap" course, an easy way to credits. There is much repetition in it, and it seems to be spread over too long a period in school life. It is in line, however, with the principles on curriculum making laid down in the report of the National Society for the Study of Education.

Here twelve able educators of the country reached an agreement on certain fundamentals. Like the Wickersham report, however, the part which is signed by the twelve is followed by so much of exception and objection that much force is taken from the agreement. One wing of the committee emphasized the need for building the curriculum around the interests and activities of children. The other wing stressed preparation for adult life. The way they solved this was through the following statement:

"An important principle to guide the reconstruction of the school is this, therefore: The curriculum can prepare for effective participation in social life by providing a present life of experiences which increasingly identifies the child with the aims and activities derived from analysis of social life as a whole."

Here are a few other statements from this document:

"The materials of instruction [individual and group activities of children, reading, open forum discussions, excursions, what not] will be chosen in the light of the analysis and appraisal of the activities in which people, old and young, most universally and permanently engage."

"The committee records its judgment that in so far as the curriculum is prepared in advance, the materials of at least the first nine grades, and increasingly of the grades beyond, will be organized so as to produce knowledge, skills and appreciations necessary to the common life of the people."

"The essential element in 'subject matter' is probably now best conceived as 'ways of responding' or of reacting. . . . New subject matter is brought into the curriculum as race experience, therefore, to provide patterns of response which the learner needs at any stage of his growth."

"The curriculum should be conceived in terms of a succession of experiences and enterprises having a maximum of lifelikeness for the learner."

"Because of the great changes in modern life, there is at present a real need in certain fields for a new synthesis of knowledge and, correspondingly, for a new grouping of the materials of the school. . . ."

"The committee heartily recommends experimentation now under way in schools and colleges attempting to unite in single general courses bodies of knowledge which heretofore have been separated."

"The committee condemns emphatically the evaluation of the product of educational effort solely by means of subject matter types of examinations now prevalent in state and local school systems."

SYMPHONY CONCERTS, ART LECTURES ARE ON LIST FOR WINTER

Extracurricular culture courses for public school children will be continued this year, according to the announcement yesterday by Supt. William J. Bogan in a letter to principals.

The young people's concerts given by the Chicago Symphony orchestra will begin Nov. 3. There will be a series of six concerts for elementary school children, succeeding programs to be given the first Wednesday afternoon of each month. On Nov. 24 a similar series will be started for high school students. About 4,000 students attended these concerts last year. To cover certain costs, a nominal admission charge of from 15 to 50 cents will be charged.

Beginning on Sept. 26 Dudley Crafts Watson will give a series of 12 Saturday afternoon classes in art and appreciation at the Art institute. These lectures are provided under the "James Nelson Raymond Public School and Children's Lecture" fund. Attendance at these courses is limited to three selected seventh or eighth grade students from each school.

For younger students regular instruction on the harmonica will be given, according to Miss Rose L. Gannon, assistant director of music. A harmonica band of 500 boys and girls is in prospect for the World's Fair, she said.

Gallery tours of the Art institute are to be resumed next week under the direction of Mrs. Mary H. Buehr.

For teachers a creative writing course is being offered by John T. Frederick in coöperation with the Medill school of journalism at Northwestern university. The course is designed to make teachers quicker to perceive vital and creative English expression on the part of their students, according to James E. McDade, assistant superintendent of schools.

Registration for evening "opportunity" high school and grade school classes was held last night in 16 public schools in various parts of the city. Enrollment Thursday night in the six high schools which will give accredited evening courses reached a total of 7,756, according to Dr. Charles T. Lunak, assistant superintendent of schools. Instruction in all evening classes will begin Monday night.

Among the schools giving work leading to a diploma the distribution was as follws: Austin, 850; Crane, 1,540; Englewood, 1,940; Fenger, 500; Lake View, 726; Schurz, 2,200. Opportunity courses for those who do not wish credit toward graduation are to be given at Lane, Waller, Medill, Harrison, Washburne, Phillips, Tilden, Bowen, Lindblom, Jones, Franklin, Goethe, Anderson, Jackson, and Lawson. Courses in these schools will include regular elementary and high school subjects, home economics, commercial work, technical work, and English for foreign language speaking persons.

Advice on Diet Overdone, Says Vitamin's Father

Dr. McCollum Talks at Health Conference.

At the rate of 1,000 scientific papers a year this country is learning more and more about the innumerable phases of a perfectly balanced diet, Dr. A. V. McCullom of Johns Hopkins university, designated as "the man who discovered vitamins," yesterday tagged onto this bit of information given teachers attending the health institute program of the milk council yesterday at the Hotel Sherman the fact that he himself had evolved in the public mind during the last several years from a radical to a conservative.

"It looks almost as though the country had gone wild on the topic of correct nutrition," acknowledged the man who back in 1918 was considered odd because of the vast family of rats he had under supervision and on strict diet schedules, to determine the effects of a lack of this and a surplus of that element on their growth.

"Nowadays," he added, "other physicians long ago passed me in advocating changes that seem farfetched even to myself. I prefer to examine them closely before passing on their values."

In its progress toward the diet most efficient in sustaining life and promoting growth and the various functions of the body, Dr. McCullom emphasized the fact that "perfection of structure in our bodies is necessary for perfection of physiological performance, and that perfection can be obtained by the scientifically balanced diet."

This country is going to continue, he declared, to eat a great deal of cereal products, largely because they are so abundant and so easily raised. Americans will continue to consume quantities of milk, of sugar, of meat and potatoes, and also an appreciable percentage of vegetables.

To augment this list with foods that will round it out to more perfectly balanced proportions, generally speaking, we should adopt a type of food much in favor in the orient—leaves of such plants as beets, carrots, turnips and radishes. Their mineral content makes them valuable, Dr. McCullom explained. Further, we should make it a point to eat some raw food each day, with oranges, apples and tomatoes near the head of that list.

Of the thirty-seven essentials his extensive experiments have convinced him must be contained in the perfect diet, mineral elements are gaining in importance, the speaker stated. There are now eleven that should not be missing, whereas last year he could name only ten, and the previous year he thought nine would be sufficient. These include iron, phosphorus, iodine, salt, etc.

Gloria Swanson Gives Her Views of Wedding Story

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—"Will you tell me please, why I should confirm or deny a story which I am supposed to be keeping a secret?" Gloria Swanson said today on reading a published report she had married Michael Farmer, New York broker, somewhere in the United States last month. Under California law, she must wait one year before her divorce decree from Marquis Henri de la Falaise can become final. The divorce was granted to Gloria here on Nov. 6, 1930. Miss Swanson and Farmer recently arrived on the same train from Chicago. Farmer is living at a hotel in Beverly Hills, one mile from Miss Swanson's residence. Farmer could not be reached.

Yankee Missal Problem Divides Church Conclave

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—George W. Wickersham, former United States attorney general, today brought the problem of the legality of the "American missal" or mass book before the fiftieth triennial general convention of the Episcopal church in session here.

The missal was prepared during the last year under the direction of the Rt. Rev. Benjamin F. P. Ivins, bishop coadjutor of Milwaukee. It is a book prepared for the altars of the church and contains services and supplementary devotions, claimed by its enemies to be of Roman Catholic origin, and not found in the standard book of common prayer.

Mr. Wickersham's resolution declares, as brought before the house of deputies, the standard book of common prayer "is the only authorized book of worship in this church." The standard prayer book then was delivered to Presiding Bishop James de Wolf Perry by Bishop Edward L. Parsons, chairman of the prayer book revision committee. The standard prayer book represents the work of the special commission during the years 1913 to 1928, when the book was completed and authorized by general convention of 1928. The standard book, presented this morning, and from which all official copies are made, was the gift of J. P. Morgan.

Bishop Ivins stated today that 600 copies of the "American Missal" have been purchased for use in churches throughout the country. He declared the number of sales has proved highly satisfactory, in view of the fact that nearly half the bishops of the church have forbidden its use in their dioceses. The "American Missal" is elaborately bound and printed in various types to indicate those points at which it varies from the authorized prayer bok. The missal is understood to be widely used in the diocese of Chicago. There its use has not been forbidden by Bishop George Craig Stewart.

The formal presentation of the standard prayer book recalled stormy sessions of general conventions of past years when the book was being prepared. Bishop Parsons stated that its final approval three years ago in Washington, D. C., represented the agreement of all parties of the church. He pointed to the fact that by its formal adoption all other books are automatically outlawed. However, the missal will be the center of stormy debate in both executive houses of the church.

Doris Cautions Youth to Avoid Rash Errors It Will Regret Later

BY DORIS BLAKE.

You very young bloods, female, whose self-appointed mission is to aim spitballs at the chaperon or what she stands for, all in the name of freedom, overlook one big item in your pursuit of love, life, and liberty. I mean you young women who discuss and do things openly that turn the hairs of us older ones. You young women who talk, and no doubt believe, the theory that "men don't care how you've lived before you met them," "that men expect you to come to them more or less experienced." I mean you young women who, in your own vernacular, "play the game according to your 1931 lights."

You have qualities we older ones must admire. You have a courage that, directed in other channels, would mean far more happiness than you'll ever get following the cry of what you call freedom. You're good to look upon with a coldly analytical, physical eye. But your one great weakness over which you have no control is your inexperience and the fact that you refuse to accept the advice of those who have lived to learn. You can't take count of your future reaction to what in your now tender years seems freedom.

You'll probably toss off with a wisecrack what I am about to reveal now. It is this. When that ONE man comes into your life you're not going to be the free thinking, free talking young lady you are at this moment. If you love him there is going to come over you a change, and regrets, if you have brought a soiled you, a much mauled and pawed you.

And don't laugh that off as "old stuff" with a Victorian date line attached to it. When you run into real love you're confronted with a deep, deep desire for cleanliness and decency. A spiritual quality you never suspected yourself of possessing rises to the surface. I'm not trying to be dramatic [melodramatic, you may call it]. I'm talking purely from my experience here as confident to girls into whose correspondence is written this sudden fineness and cleanliness awakening of which we speak.

You wouldn't believe how often that sentence is repeated: "Shall I tell my fiance about it?" And this: "I'm afraid he'll turn from me because he thinks so highly of me."

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Love Isn't the Word.

"Dear Miss Blake: The boy I love says he loves me, but he always takes other girls out, and tells me he does. Could it be he doesn't love me?

"ALMA."

I guess he means he is fond of you, Alma—and it is possible to care for several different girls at one time, you know.

Nothing to Do.

"Dear Miss Blake: The boy I love suddenly stopped calling and taking me out. What should I do? Dot."

Police Officer and Social Worker Agree on Modern Training

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

In a correspondence which has a never ending fascination, I often find letters so interesting that I can scarcely refrain from using them. Yet, I must sometimes do so for various reasons.

Such a letter came to me from a far distant place not long ago. It quoted most interesting but also tragic cases of the grown girl who is trapped by the tyranny of some invalid ruse of her mother. One girl finally got free enough to go to work, but had to account for every minute of her waking time to her mother, who, when her daughter asserted her independence, took to her bed and is now acting the invalid martyr.

Another young woman said she spent her entire girlhood dashing for doctors to save her mother's life, whenever she asserted herself. A doctor finally told the girl that these were emotional tantrums. The mother recovered when the girl escaped her domination.

Some days ago we had an article in this department on why girls leave home. The statement quoted was the opinion of the chief of the bureau of missing persons. It is interesting to reinforce the point by quoting from the letter just mentioned "As for the problem of the really wayward girls," Jane Addams says:

"An officer who has long experience in the Juvenile court of Chicago, and who has listened to hundreds of cases involving wayward girls, gives it as his deliberate impression that a large majority of cases are from homes where the discipline has been rigid, and where the girl has revolted, secretly at first, followed, of course, by open rupture.

"Even with the Latin races, when this system is tried in America, it often breaks down, and where the Anglo-Saxons anywhere imitate this régime, it is usually utterly futile.

"'They follow the first part of the program as far as the repression is concerned, but they find it impossible to follow the second, because all sorts of inherited notions deter them.

"'Unless we mean to go back to old world customs, which are already hopelessly broken, there would seem to be only one path open to us in America. That path implies freedom for the young people, made safe only through their own self-control.

"'The mothers who are of most use to the normal city working girl, are the mothers who substitute keen present interest and activity for solemn warnings and restraint — self-expression for self-repression.

Chic Scarf Complements Dotted Frock from Paris

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Numberless Parisiennes are wearing printed silk coat dresses. The overwhelming favorite in printed materials for such dresses is something garnished with polka dots, and the smartest frocks of this kind combine crêpe with a white ground and colored dots, with crêpe having a black ground and the same colored dots. The kind of crêpe silk you choose depends on yourself. Paris prefers crêpe de chine, crêpe marocain or crêpe georgette.

The Bruyere coat dress, shown in our sketch, is made of georgette showing small chartreuse green dots on a black ground. It has a scarf, that looks more like a vest, showing green dots on a white ground. This scarf begins on the left side, in front, is folded around the neck and passes diagonally down to the left side of the waistline, where it is spread out and held under a crushed belt of the black and green dotted crêpe.

Madame Bruyere attaches the scarf-vest of this dress by snaps at the front of the neckline and at the left side of the waistline under the belt, so it may be taken off and laundered. Two or three scarfs keep this dress in continuous dainty readiness for general wear.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Plea for a Young Man.

"I wish to make a plea for a young man who has been confined to a hospital for several years. He is badly in need of a suit, size 38, and any other clothing your readers may have to give. He hopes to leave the hospital soon and would be most grateful for this help. D. O."

After such a long period of illness this young man is unable to provide for himself the things he needs. Starting out into the world again would be a much simpler problem for him if the item of clothing was taken care of.

Just Plain Soap and Water Does Wonders for Blemished Nose

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Improving the texture of the skin on the nose is a busy little industry in itself. That's the facial spot upon which most energy is directed toward the removal of blackheads, enlarged pores, and shine.

Another disfigurement suffered by noses is made up of those little red or broken veins on the wings of the nose.

But the first trouble is far and away the most common. Blackheads invariably go with a skin that is over oily. And curiously enough, it's the nose area that bears the heaviest burden. Foreheads next, and mouth corners third.

With all the modern beauty discoveries, to date no one seems to have found a better pore cleaner than good old soap and water. The condition calls for special washing with hot water and a good soap, or a soap substitute like the well known tincture of green soap.

A not too soft complexion brush is advocated by the best face beautifying experts. A rinse in clear warm water after the hot water and soap scrubbing and then—WITHOUT FAIL—the use of cold water or some good astringent property. If blackheads are in a condition to be removed, the removal takes place after the rinsing in warm water. Then the astringent is applied after the removal of the tiny masses of grease and oil composition.

The same treatment that does away with the blackheads will eventually eliminate the excess shine. And the astringent used in each treatment will counteract the enlargement of the pores.

But where just thousands of women fail in the care of this feature that occupies the center of the face stage is in rubbing soiled powder puffs over the surface continuously and then not taking the time for a thorough cleansing at night. The soiled puff shouldn't be used, of course, but even the cleanest puff will get soiled in a day's rubbing over an oily surfaced skin.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

T. U.: VERY BAD CASES OF sunburn are relieved by application of lime water and linseed oil—equal parts of each. Cold water should not be used directly after a burning. Bathe with a solution of borax in warm water and then apply a healing cream.

Food Talk.

Saturday morning and baking—do the two go together for you? Do you stock up on cookies and cinnamon rolls for "lunching" youngsters? If you do, have them lend a strong arm to the beating of the chocolate cakes. There will be sufficient reward for their efforts when it is time to scrape the frosting dish.

The little cakes just mentioned are the best ever tasted, and you are challenged to disprove that statement. The recipe is a legacy, and may be quickly and easily tossed together. Especially, if you use the "strong arm" to which I referred. They are good frosted with a white or chocolate boiled frosting, though many cooks prefer the uncooked mocha butter frosting.

The mocha frosting is made with one cup of powdered sugar, four tablespoons of cream, two squares of unsweetened melted chocolate, and one tablespoon of butter. Cold strong coffee may be substituted for the cream, or use half of each. About one-eighth of a teaspoon of salt and half a teaspoon of vanilla supply the finishing flavor.

CHOCOLATE CAKES.

1 cup of sugar.
2 eggs.
2½ squares of unsweetened chocolate.
1 teaspoon of baking powder.
1 teaspoon of vanilla.

Cream the butter; add the sugar and cream together. Add the melted chocolate and then the milk. Sift the flour; measure and sift the salt and baking powder with it. Add to the sugar mixture. Beat the batter well. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff, drop in the yolks and beat together. Add to the cake mixture. Pour into greased muffin tins. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees Fahrenheit.] This will make 24 small cakes.

RICE CROQUETTES.

Heat and moisten with a little thick white sauce one pint of cooked rice. Add one well beaten egg, two tablespoons of grated cheese, and salt and pepper to taste. Cool, shape, and roll in cracker dust. Then dip the croquettes in beaten egg, roll in cracker dust again, and fry a golden brown in deep fat.

LAMB SOUFFLE.

Melt two tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan and add to it: Two tablespoons of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, and two dashes or white pepper. Add very gradually one pint of milk. Bring to the boiling point and stir in one-half cup of bread crumbs, a little onion juice, and a little chopped celery. Remove from the fire and stir in one pint of cold cooked lamb, and the well beaten yolks of three eggs. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Bake in a buttered dish set in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven. Bake for twenty to twenty-five minutes. Serve immediately with a tomato or mushroom sauce.

Some Etchings Here; Wedding Rites in Paris

BY THALIA——

It was at the tea Mr. Lawrence M. Tibbs gave yesterday afternoon in his lovely new apartment for the first Chicago showing of the etchings of his son-in-law, Redmond Stephens Wright. The artist, who, with Mrs. Wright and their small daughter, is here for a short visit before they return to Paris and the making of more etchings, was explaining about a certain process he has used in some of his small portraits.

"That one is of my sister, Brier," he pointed out, "and that's of her husband." "Her husband!" exclaimed one of the guests. "I didn't know she was married. When and to whom?" Well, it seems that she was married in the Wrights' apartment in Paris one day in late February or early March [Mr. Wright didn't remember exactly], and her husband is Alexander Stoller, a young sculptor who had been studying and working in France and who roomed with Mr. Wright for several years before his marriage. Mr. Wright was best man, and "Happy" Miss Marion Wright was her sister's only attendant.

"We had a gay time," adds Mr. Wright, "went out into the country in a bus and did it up in real French style. Now they have a little house in Chantilly for the summer, and will probably be in Paris for the winter." Mr. Stoller originally was from New York City, and is a nephew of Mr. George Bull, president of the Saratoga racing association. His wife made her debut several years ago. She had danced in the Service club plays and has been studying music in Paris. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Van Doren Wright.

How About the Etchings and Guests Who Saw Them.

Near the portraits that evoked the story of the wedding was one of Louis G. Gulfred, secretary of the International Red Cross, and around the panel walls of the little reading room were a collection of the things Mr. Wright has done in Normandy, Holland, and France. In the living room were more subjects done in Colorado this summer—bucking ponies and western scenes. Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick was one of the first guests to arrive and admire the work and have tea in Mr. Viles' pleasant green walled dining room that overlooks the lake and the park. Mrs. Wright took people around to show them her husband's work, and Mr. Viles' sister, Mrs. Stewart Hathaway, assisted in receiving the guests. The Wrights are to be here for a week or so longer before returning to Paris. There will be a New York exhibit of the etchings and one in Paris.

Sidelights—The John Alden Carpenters were in New York at the St. Regis this week and, as the decorators are now at work in their Rush street residence, they're probably planning to return to it soon. . . . Miss Catharine M. Noyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Paul Noyes of 19 Scott street, who was graduated from Vassar in June, has returned from her summer trip in Europe. . . . Dr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Ryerson have returned from a stay at Charlevoix. . . . Mrs. Helen Walton of the Lake Shore Drive hotel has returned from Connecticut. She has been playwrighting and studying drama in the Manhattan theater colony at Middletown, Conn., with occasional trips to see her son, "Woody," in camp near by. . . . Chicagoans at Virginia Hot Springs for the fall season include Mrs. James H. Winston and her son, Albert F. Winston, and the John T. Piries Jr. Mr. Charles H. Schweppe is taking his daughter, Miss Laura, and his niece, Miss Mary Reed, there, probably for some tennis.

For her marriage on Oct. 3 to Calvin Fentress Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fentress of Hubbard Woods, Miss Frances Wood, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood of Highland Park, will have her two sisters, Mrs. Edwin Tullis and Mrs. James R. Addington, as matrons of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Janet Kirk, Miss Christabel Wheeler, Miss Ruth Card, Mrs. Joseph Terbell [Phoebe Logan], Miss Virginia Thurman of Baltimore, Miss Louise Day Smith of Memphis, Tenn.; Miss Rosemary Baur, and Miss Mary Wood.

Paul Fentress is to be best man for his brother, and the ushers will include Thomas Fentress, Gordon Kelley, Dustin Grannis, William Powne, John Farrar, John Gilbert of Philadelphia, James Guller of New York, Burbeck Crabbe of New Jersey, and James Roland Addington. The service is to be read by the bride's uncle, Bishop Ernest Stires, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the Trinity Episcopal church, and a reception at the Wood residence will follow.

The marriage of Miss Jacqueline Stewart, daughter of Countess Raoul de Roussay de Sales and Cecil Parker Stewart of New York and Palm Beach, to Count Giovanni Cardelli, son of Mme. Ruth Lamson Cardelli of Paris and Chicago, is to take place the latter part of this month in Paris. Afterward the bride and groom and his mother are to return to Chicago.

Miss Florence Carr may suffer a painful case of writer's cramp from penning "thank you" notes to all the people who sent flowers for her debut tea yesterday afternoon at Shadowbridge, the Lake Forest residence of her father, Robert F. Carr.

Floral gifts of almost every variety bloomed all over the house and terrace, and corsage offerings were so numerous that somebody said the debutante could wear orchids every day for three weeks.

Despite the murky skies the party was held in the spacious gardens, and shortly after the guests began to arrive the sun came out and shone dimly through the autumnal haze.

The debutante and her father received their guests on the flower laden terrace. Her sister, Mrs. W. Press Hodgkins, who came out at a similar tea and reception a few years ago, helped to receive when she wasn't occupied with her year and a half old son Billy. The blond, curly headed infant was present most of the afternoon and came in for as much admiring comment as did his debutante aunt. Miss Carr wore a pale blue lace frock with a long-sleeved bolero jacket and held a large bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Her sister wore a chartreuse crêpe frock, a corsage of gardenias, and a turban of brown velvet.

Miss Myra Wilson Little, daughter of the Charles G. Littles of Evanston, made her formal bow yesterday afternoon at a tea at her parents' residence in Evanston. After the tea Mr. and Mrs. Little were hosts at a large dinner-dance for the debutante and her assistants. Miss Little wore a rust colored velvet gown with a short train and carried brown-tinted orchids and Talisman roses. Besides a group of contemporary debutantes, the assistants at the tea included Mrs. Sewell Avery, Mrs. Edwin Ashcraft Jr., Mrs. Murry Nelson, Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson, Mrs. Morris Wilson, Mrs. Augustus Eddy, and Miss Little's sister, Mrs. Curtis Nelson.

Today's debutantes are, well, not exactly legion, but there are five of them. They aren't all having teas, though, and two of them are having joint parties, so the sum total of the parties is three. In Highland Park this afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Glidden and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Juergens are to present their daughters, Miss Peggy Glidden and Miss Gwendolyn Juergens, at a tea at the Glidden residence, and Miss Welthyan Harmon will be presented at a tea to be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert P. Harmon, at their residence.

Miss Mary Cushman and Miss Helen Walcott are to make their bow at a dance to be given this evening at the Indian Hill Country club by their respective parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Cushman and Mr. and Mrs. Chester H. Walcott, all of Winnetka. Miss Walcott's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Cummins, are to receive with the debutantes and their parents. A small dinner for the Winnetka debutantes and the ushers will precede the dance, which will be out of doors if the weather is fine.

New York, Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Peter B. Behr of Chicago sailed for Europe on board the White Star liner Olympic today.

Family or Career? Girls Desire Both, Woman Expert Says

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Girls seven or eight years ago did not know whether they wanted a home or a career. Today they want both.

But, Mrs. Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America and lecturer in parent education in the child development institute, teachers' college, Columbia university, says they now regard work from the point of view of the family.

"Our generation had to prove that women can have an education and a business career," Mrs. Gruenberg said today.

"We proved that, and now women are no longer a novelty in any field in which men formerly were featured alone.

"But sometimes we claim too much. For instance, in order to be given a chance, women had to claim they could take care of a family, children, and a home on the side."

Today, however, they realize they must plan their choice of home life, she said. They know there is something wrong between having too much or nothing.

"If a woman has only been a mother she reaches 40 with her work practically done. Her children are grown. She must sit at home awaiting a future of inactivity."

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

A new hooker with a fancy name—Van Lingle Mungo—fresh up from the Hartford, Conn., club, stepped in yesterday and wrecked the winning streak the Cubs had stretched into eight games. The young fellow, who at the age of 20 years has attained a foot of height and still is growing, kept the Wrigley field occupants so well subdued that they were forced to succumb to the Robins, 3 to 2. That shed the Cubs' third place margin to two and one-half games and at the same time gave the pursuing Robins their 14th decision in 21 efforts against the north siders this season.

Mungo's fancy pitching was discouraging enough, but not as much as the conspiracy of Babe Herman and Lefty O'Doul against Charley Root. That the Cub star now has 14 defeats instead of 17 victories can be credited to this pair of mischief makers. O'Doul was on base four times, three because of hits and the other as the result of Root's generosity. Twice the terrible Babe scored him, once on a home run and once on a single. Except for these two fellows, Root's afternoon was not unpleasant.

Game Started Slowly.

The first inning consumed 25 minutes, which was altogether too long for the scoring of three runs. Two of them went to the Robins' cause and not much time was lost in their production. O'Doul walked with one out and scored ahead of Babe Herman's homer into the right field seats. Then the Cubs retrieved one of the runs. English walked, but was out stealing before W. Herman could single. Herman took third on Cuyler's double. Bell walked, and on Burton's fly to O'Doul in left Billy Herman scored. Dan Taylor struck out to end the lengthy session.

Root almost courted more trouble for himself in the second inning. Despite a fumble, an error, and a single he wasn't scored on, chiefly because of Hartnett's arm. Lopez opened the inning with a double and an instant later was caught off second on one of Hartnett's bullet-like throws to English. After Mungo had fanned, Frederick survived on a fumble by Bell and O'Doul singled into center. The threat ended when Babe Herman grounded to Billy Herman.

Cubs Tie Score.

The Cubs produced a 2 to 2 tie in the fourth inning, but it didn't last. Dan Taylor led off with a smash past first base. Bissonette knocked it down, but didn't recover until after Taylor had reached the base. O'Doul pulled down a long, hard drive by Grimm and Babe Herman tried to do the same on one by Hartnett. Both the ball and the Babe bounced off the fence, Hartnett going to second.

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

Now that the Cardinals and Athletics have ended the suspense as to the winners of the National and American league pennants, the statisticians can get busy for their annual world series carnival of facts, figures, and fancies.

Whatever arguments supporters of the St. Louis club can advance for victory chances, the Athletics have gained an undeniable advantage by the break in the schedule.

The first two games will be played in St. Louis and there will be an intermission of two days before the series is resumed in Philadelphia. That means Connie Mack, who has the opportunity to make baseball history with three consecutive world championships, can get by the first four games with his two star pitchers, Grove and Earnshaw.

Of course, maybe pitching won't decide this series. Perhaps the Cardinals are a stronger club than they were a year ago, when they lost to the Athletics in six games. They have the advantage of the experience gained in that competition as well as the mental benefit of having won two straight National league titles.

Last season the Cardinals weren't able to relax their pace for a moment, because the Cubs were at their heels until the last two days of the race. This year it has been a romp all the way.

Jimmy Carolan, a former New York newspaper man who now is vice president of the National Billiard association, called up the other night and said, "Let's take a spin over to Kleckhefer's and watch 'em play billiards."

"Billiards!" we exclaimed. "Do they still play that game?"

To our astonishment Mr. Carolan, with a flair for originality, replied, "Boy, and how!"

And sure enough, there were Willie Hoppe and Welker Cochran engaged in an exhibition match that lasted a week with scarcely any mention in the public prints. Each day they played one block of three cushion and then switched to balk line.

While, on the whole, there isn't big money in competitive billiards these days, Hoppe, who at present holds no title, manages to earn from $20,000 to $25,000 a year. He has been playing the game since he was 8 year old and has passed his 45th birthday. In that span he has made more than $500,000.

Hoppe is the man who attracts the crowds. He is the Knute Rockne, the Jack Dempsey and the Babe Ruth of the green cloth. He has some of their color. He isn't the player he was but he still can hold his own with the leaders.

"I can continue to play three cushion billiards as long as my eyes hold up," he remarked. "There isn't the strain attached to three cushions that there is in balk line. A man can hold peak form in balk line only about 15 years.

"I believe three cushion billiards is the coming sport. The game is more spectacular. Every shot appears to be a difficult maneuver. There is no chance to group the balls in one end of the table and keep them there for 30 or 40 minutes. It is a much easier game than balk line for the spectator to follow."

Hoppe thinks that golf has cut into the popularity of billiards heavily the last few years and if his game is to flourish, there must be an awakening of interest among boys, particularly those of college age. He suggests that it would be a fine thing for the universities to encourage the sport.

He hopes that his 13 year old son will help put the idea across when he enrolls at Notre Dame a few years hence.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 18.—The White Sox forged further to the rear today in their sensational last minute fight for eighth place, losing to the Athletics, 3 to 1, with such artistic ease that they seem certain to blow both games of Saturday's doubleheader and leave town with a clean sweep of the series. The miracle team of modern times, which has come from in front to dislodge the Boston Red Sox in a never say live campaign for the lowest position in the league, today showed the stuff it takes to lose under difficulties.

Although Connie Mack used substitutes at most of the positions, including two players who were waived to him last year, there was one point in which he did not seem to be making a sincere effort to lose. He used Lefty Grove for his pitcher, and Lefty allowed only five hits against the ten which Faber and Bowler gave. This was his 30th victory of the season and the statisticians went crazy as the ball game ended, reporting that he was the only left-hander of modern times to win that many.

Mr. Grove Nears Records.

I shudder to contemplate the consternation of these statisticians had they known that Lefty also is the first pitcher in either league to win 20 games since 1920, when Sergt. Jim Bagby, who chucked some for Cleveland, won 31 games. Grove now has 145 victories in the major leagues, against 60 defeats. Our hero has won more than 20 games each of the four seasons he has been up in the Pullman circuit.

Among other things, this year he has tied the American league record for consecutive victories with 16, and he now has an average for the year of .909, which will be another league record if he hold out for another week. Only three teams beat Grove this year, one of them being this same wonder outfit of Donie Bush's. But the Sox are not counting that, as it came early in the season before they had thoroughly mastered the art of losing. A home run in the eleventh inning by Lou Fonseca cost him that one. St. Louis and Washington also have beaten him.

Sox Meet Challenge.

There was a party named Lady Baldwin who won 42 in 1886, but he wore whiskers and lived on the south side, whereas Grove is a great meat eater and owns a dog, so it is impossible to draw a fair comparison between the two achievements. Then again there was a pitcher named Frank Killen of Pittsburgh, who won 32 in 1896, but Killen's father was a policeman and his wife was a Hogan. On the other hand, Grove's name is not Frank, but Mose, and he never

25,000 TO WATCH WORLD'S RICHEST RACING PROGRAM

New York, Sept. 18.—[Special.]—The richest day's racing in America, or for that matter in the world, will be run off tomorrow afternoon at Belmont Park, where the six race program headed by the $125,000 Futurity is expected to attract 25,000. The Jockey Club Gold Cup race, which will see Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand in action again, will be the third stake. The first of the three will be the Grand National steeplechase, worth upwards of $30,000, which will make the value of the day's program close to $175,000.

Only two entries were named to contend with Twenty Grand for the $10,000 purse in the Gold Cup. They are E. R. Bradley's 3 year old Barometer and Whitney stable's Blenheim. Blenheim also is entered in the Lexington handicap and may not start in the Gold Cup.

A field of 13 has been named for the Futurity, which will have its 42d running. Twelve colts and one filly make up the field, the lone filly being C. V. Whitney's undefeated Top Flight, which will run coupled in the betting with Mad Frump. The entry seems sure to rule the public choice at a short price, despite the presence in the field of Mrs. L. G. Kaufman's Tick On, winner of the $50,000 Hopeful at Saratoga.

Tick On will have top weight of 130 pounds because of that victory, and Top Flight will be carrying top weight of 127 pounds for her sex. Top Flight already has run and won under 127 pounds, while Tick On captured the Hopeful under 117 pounds. Should Top Flight win she will be making turf history, for no horse of her sex ever has won with 127 pounds. Anita Peabody, the last filly to win, carried 124 pounds in 1927. Eight other fillies won before that with less than 124.

Hallahan Is Wild Fellow on Diamond, but Mild Off Field

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 18.—Most major league managers are of the opinion that they cannot thrive unless they have two or three left handed pitchers hanging around. The St. Louis Cardinals have won the National league pennant of 1931 with only one left hander on the pitching roster—but what a left hander!

We refer, of course, to Wild William Anthony Hallahan, the 27 year old pride of Binghamton, N. Y., still Wild Bill but not nearly so wild as he was last year when he was looked upon as one of the most effective pitchers in the National league. And because he wasn't so wild he had won as many victories by Sept. 1 as he gathered all last year.

Even Hallahan's losses have been impressive for the most part. This year he's been knocked out only once—by the Cubs on July 12. The majority of his other lickings have been by low score, one run margins.

Won Third Game of World Series in 1930.

Hallahan probably will pitch the third game of this year's world series—the opener in Philadelphia. Bill pitched the third game last year and the fans will long remember the 5 to 0 blistering he accorded the proud Athletics, whom he held to seven hits, three of which were knocked by Max Bishop and two by Al Simmons.

Hallahan attempted to stave off defeat in the final game of the series, but yielded to a pinch batter in the second inning and got the rap for the eventual reversal.

Now, of course, Wild Bill is willing to forget all about that final game and make his plans exclusively on the basis of what he was able to do in that third contest.

Catcher Jimmy Wilson, who is given much of the credit for teaching Hallahan control, says that Bill is certain to give the A's more trouble this year than last, which means that Jimmy expects Bill to win two games instead of one.

Most fans are familiar with the struggle Hallahan has had to gain control. He was with the Cardinals in 1924 and part of 1925 and was shipped to Syracuse because his one fault was wildness. He was with the Cards in 1926, but wildness had him back in Syracuse in 1927, where he won 19 while losing 11 despite poor control.

Houston Gets Him and South Rejoices.

Houston was his spot in 1928 and he became the hero of the southwest with 23 victories and 12 defeats. In 1929 he was with the Cards, but he walked 60 batsmen while winning four and losing four games and met with impatient treatment at the hands of Billy Southworth, then manager of the Cards.

Last year Manager Street refused to yank him with the first appearances of wild streaks and Bill rewarded the patience by turning in 15 victories, many of them against dangerous contenders.

Although wild in his work, Bill is one of the mildest lads on the team. He's one of three bachelors on the Cardinal roster and never has been known to do any night prowling. While the Cards are on the road he usually can be located in his hotel, adorned with his reading specs, perusing a sports magazine, a detective story or a radio log.

SHUTE, CREAVY REACH PRO GOLF TOURNEY FINAL

Beat Burke and Sarazen to Meet for Title.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The mortality rate of professional golf champions jumped again today as Densmore Shute of Hudson, O., defeated Billy Burke, American open champion, with his deadly putter, 1 up, in the semi-finals of the Professional Golf association championship play.

Denny used this same weapon yesterday on Tommy Armour, British open and defending professional champion. Shute toppled Armour in a quarter-final match by 3 and 1.

Burke's overthrow placed Shute into tomorrow's final round against Tom Creavy of Albany, N. Y., who qualified by trouncing Gene Sarazen, twice a P. G. A. winner and runner up to Armour last year, by the surprising margin of 5 and 3. This championship play, due to start at 10 a. m., will be refereed by Bobby Jones.

Creavy Is Unbeatable.

Creavy, making his first real bid for golfing fame, was unbeatable against Sarazen after recovering from a slightly wobbly start, which enabled Gene to gain a two hole lead. This advantage disappeared as Creavy, out in 37, snared birdie after birdie and came home in the morning with a 33, two under par, for a regulation round of 70. This superb play gave him a three hole advantage on Sarazen, who carded 74, and from then on that veteran was never in a position to make up any of his deficit.

Even at his best, Sarazen would have had his troubles, but he was far off form today, hooking many of his drives and trapping even more of his second shots. His putting stayed up just enough to save him from a frightful slaughtering. The cards:

CREAVY.

Burke in Usual Form.

Burke was in his usual form and gave Shute the keenest sort of battle. The open champion did not have many poor shots during his morning round, but he could not shake off his putting foe and they finished all square. Two birdies gave Shute a 72 and Burke's card of 73 contained four sub-par holes.

Shute started the afternoon play by capturing the two opening holes with par fours, Burke taking fives because he missed a short putt and chipped too far on the 20th green. Billy cut this lead in half with a par three on the 21st, where Denny found a trap.

Shute was still 1 up when they turned, and Burke gained a one hole lead with par play on the 28th and 29th, where Shute found more traps. After halving the 30th Denny dropped a 15 footer on the next hole for a birdie three and squared the match. Two more long ones sank under his accurate sweep and he became 2 up going to the 33d, where he outfumbled Burke for the hole, the open champion taking it with a poor five. The match became dormie 1 when they halved the 35th in par fives, and Shute stayed even with Burke on the home hole, halved with fours, to run out his victory. The cards:

SHUTE.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The Bears' varsity, with Capt. Red Grange at left half back, played during the first half and scored in each quarter. The Bears' second team was held scoreless in the third period, but aided by a recovery of a fumble on Cleveland's 20 yard line, crashed through with a third touchdown near the close of the game. Luke Johnsos and Bill Senn had a perfect record with three place kicks for the extra points. Johnsos scored twice.

Passes Lead to Touchdowns.

Cleveland did not threaten the Bears' goal during the first half. The Indians were unable to register a first down in the first 15 minutes of play although a recovered fumble gave them an excellent opportunity. However, Cleveland's passing attack functioned in the second period to pile up four first downs, but none advanced the ball within the Bears' 30 yard line.

While the Chicago squad played aggressive football, forward passes accounted for the touchdowns scored by the first team. The running attack, in which Red Grange led with a total of 80 yards, was halted by penalties and a stubborn Cleveland line.

The Bears were penalized 110 yards to 25 yards for Cleveland and five of the penalties on the Chicago eleven were for holding or tripping.

Litzenich Races to Score.

Brumbaugh's accurate passing also accounted for the second score. In the second quarter he threw to Joe Litzenich, the Bears right half, who had cut down the center of the field. Litzenich took the ball in stride and continued down the left sideline for a touchdown. Johnsos' kick again was over the bar.

George Lyon of the Kansas Aggies, who was playing his first professional game, recovered Cleveland's fumble in the last period 20 yards from goal. Dick Nesbitt, who had replaced Litzenich, failed to gain. Then Bill Senn cut through for a first down and on the next play Joe Jensvold, who had been sent in for Nesbitt, banged through Cleveland's right tackle to within four yards of the goal line. Senn then went over the opposite side of the line and place kicked for the final point of the game.

Jesse Hibbs, former Southern California tackle, played an excellent game during the third period when he replaced Roy Lyman. Hibbs promises to be one of the best men in the Bears' line before the season has advanced much farther.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Pittsburgher, the extra large son of In Memoriam, is a good race horse and he gave further proof of it at Lincoln Fields yesterday, when he won the Lincolnshire Country club purse.

Throughout his career as a 3 year old he has frequently turned in a sensational race. Folks will never forget the American Derby of last June, when he was beaten a nose by Mate, which later was to conquer Twenty Grand in the Arlington Classic. Neither will they forget some of the bad races Pittsburgher has shaken out of his system. But lots of great race horses run a bad race now and then.

Not since he took his licking at the hands of Mate in the American Derby has Pittsburgher run more brilliantly than he did in the Lincolnshire. He was traveling over a rough, drying track and he encountered an opponent in Satin Spar that made him step at his fastest clip every inch of the way.

Satin Spar Leads.

For a greater part of the race Satin Spar was in front of him, leading by a head most of the time and at other times by half a length. This fast running pair headed into the stretch far in front. Then Pittsburgher staged his rally, one of those rallies that has made him famous, which completely whipped Satin Spar in the last sixteenth of a mile.

He drew out into a comfortable lead of a length and three-quarters and held it until he greeted the judges. He ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:48 3-5, far off the record, but the track was very difficult. In the mutuels he paid $7.40. Landolt rode Pittsburgher and picked a careful path far out from the rail in the better going all the way.

There is no way of telling how good the 2 year old Sir Melton, owned by the Waggoners of Texas, might be. He has started twice and on each occasion has smothered all those who tried to keep step with him.

Sir Melton Whips Marse Robert.

He went to the post for the second time in his career in the South Bend purse yesterday. It was a dash at six furlongs. One of Kentucky's finest, Marse Robert, was in against him.

Sir Melton won by a wide margin, something like four and one-half lengths, with Marse Robert second and Pending finishing third. Eight others trailed home far back. Sir Melton had been in front from start to finish, and he won in such impressive fashion the racegoers wondered why he isn't in the $5,000 Dearborn handicap to be run this afternoon.

He had been backed heavily to win the South Bend, but there was also a lot of support from Kentucky horsemen for Marse Roberet. Sir Melton paid $6.38 to win, $3.74 to place, and $2.84 to show. Marse Robert was at $4.82 to place, and Pending paid $3.32 to show.

Over the slow track, Sir Melton ran the six furlongs in 1:14, the best time of the afternoon, and he was going so well at the end he seemed fit and ready to run any distance. He is a royally bred son of Sir Gallahad III.-Bessie Melton, and sold for $30,000 at the Saratoga yearling sales a little more than a year ago.

CONVERT CICERO DOG TRACK INTO RACING PLANT

Plan First Meet at Half Mile Oval Next May.

Horse racing will be conducted next spring on the site of the Hawthorne Kennel club, where grey hounds chased an electric rabbit nightly for four seasons until the Appellate court recently knocked the legal props from under dog racing.

The National Jockey club, a concern incorporated four months ago with $300,000 capitalization, is sponsoring the new enterprise. E. J. O'Hare, original dog track promoter in these parts, is president of the club, and Mayor Patton is secretary treasurer.

Plan Meeting to Open May 2.

"We'll open our first meeting next May 2," said Patton. "We'll have the very best of horses and officials. Any one claiming that Al Capone is behind this track may get into trouble. Big eastern sportsmen are interested in this thing."

More than 40,000 cubic yards of earth already have been dumped into the field to form the new half mile oval, said Patton.

The contract will be awarded today, Patton said, for a four deck concrete clubhouse, equipped with a bar, ladies' restrooms and pari-mutuel booths for betting. Five wooden stables have been erected and a dozen others will be built, providing stalls for 800 horses.

Follow Illinois Turf Rules.

"It'll be the prettiest little half mile track in the state—with trees, shrubs, lawns and everything," asserted Louis Cowen, who happened to be on the premises with Patton. Cowen is publisher of the Cicero Tribune and personal bondsman for Capone. Cowen emphasized that he was not an official of the club.

The projected track is situated at 31st street and Laramie avenue, Cicero, almost in the shadow of the Hawthorne race track. The Hawthorne track promoters are members of the Illinois Turf association. Patton indicated he would abide by the rules of that association, without applying for membership in it. Stuyvesant Peabody, head of the turf association, indicated that body might take cognizance of the new track later.

"For the present," he said, "we have no official knowledge that the club exists. When the new club begins to operate, steps may be taken. Just now we know nothing about it."

Hakoah Soccer Team to Open Season Tomorrow

The Chicago Hakoah Athletic club will open its soccer league schedule tomorrow meeting the British Colonial Vets at 64th street and Racine avenue in a major league game.

HARRINGTON OUT AS SANTA PAULA PLAYS FOR TITLE

Faces Hurricanes with Cripples Today.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Crippled by an injury to Alfredo Harrington, who today was thrown and injured during the national polo pony show at Meadowbrook, Argentina's Santa Paula team makes its bid for the United States open championship at Meadowbrook tomorrow.

Santa Paula faces the Hurricanes, defending champion, in a more or less desperate condition. Harrington, who served as one of the judges at the show today, was riding in a class when his mount bolted through a gate across which a ribbon was stretched. Harrington fell against a flagstaff and his legs struck against the iron fence surrounding the ring. An X-ray examination revealed a damaged ligament and a cracked bone in the right knee and it is practically certain he will be unable to play tomorrow, though he insisted on trying to have his leg bound so that he could sit on a horse.

With Harrington out, Santa Paula expects to recall Manuel Andrada. Andrada played back in the opening game against Roslyn and fell. His right hand, which had been injured earlier, was hurt again and he remained out of the semi-final against Greentree. He can ride and handle his stick a bit and it is probable that the South Americans will use him at back and send his substitute, Andres Gazzotti, to No. 1.

Caddies Hold Annual Golf Tournament at Flossmoor

One hundred and fifty caddies of the Flossmoor Country club, after carrying clubs most of the spring and all of the summer, had their own day over the south side course yesterday. Wearing the customary blue caps and sweaters, they battled par for $400 in prizes.

THE PICCADILLY HOTEL
PICCADILLY & REGENT STREET
LONDON, W.1

Messrs The Regal Shps Co.,
Whitman Mass.
U. S. A.

Dear Sirs,

*At the request of Mr. H. J. Bliss, we have been individually working for some time in the preparation of a complete wardrobe of Bespoke Boots and Shoes.

The final selection of each model was based on the collective advice of our best dressed clients living from Sandringham to Singapore.

Few men in the world possess so complete an outfit of hand made footwear and we doubt if any single collection is as authentic in every detail.

Individually, we are proud of the selection made from each of us - collectively we take pleasure in sending these splendid examples of English and Scottish craftsmanship to America - and with pardonable pride we name this wardrobe "Fit for a King".

Yours faithfully,

Actual photograph of section of Regal Store Window Showing Originals and Regal Reproductions of a complete line of Shoes for Street, Dress and Sport, Designed by the Master Bootmakers of the World, which they describe (see letter) as a Shoe Wardrobe "Fit for a King."

No Shoe Manufacturer or Retailer in America or elsewhere ever attempted to produce a line of shoes of this Quality with this complete range of Expensive and Exclusive Styles to sell at TWICE our one price, $6.60.

When you see a Hunting Boot 16 inches high for $6.60 made of Genuine Weather Grain Leather with Viscolized full double Oak Soles and steel slugged solid leather heels, it makes everybody sit up and take notice and wonder how it can be done.

But it is more difficult to see the difference in Quality in a Smart Street Oxford. That is why this year so many are apt to be fooled by a Price Ticket on a dolled-up window shoe.

We thought the easiest way for you to make a comparison and the best way for us to prove unusual Value in a Stylish Town Shoe was to buy the best shoe made by the King's own bootmaker and put the Regal Reproduction right beside the original in our windows, and let you decide.

These famous Custom Bootmakers buy only the finest leathers, regardless of price. And this year we have not only reproduced their Lasts, Patterns and every Style Detail of their hand-made Custom models, but we have used the same expensive Upper Leathers purchased from the same tanners.

In the Regal Reproductions we are using Bordeaux Grain, the finest Calfskin in the World, made of Paris City skins, never before used except in the highest priced shoes; Genuine Willow Calf tanned in Frankfort, Germany, in the new Burgundy shade; Holland Grain tanned in Oisterwyck, Holland; Martin's of Glasgow Scotch Grain, Heather Grain and the expensive celebrated Moor Calf, never before used in a shoe at this price.

These exclusive Styles and these expensive Leathers will startle and stop every shoe man who passes our window and we know these unusual values at $6.60 will interest every man who wears shoes.

Schaaf Here, Starts Drill for Griffith

Ernie Schaaf, the Boston heavyweight, arrived in Chicago yesterday accompanied by Jerry Buckley, brother of Johnnie, his manager. Schaaf, who weighs more than 200 pounds and is more than six feet tall, went to work immediately at Brown's gymnasium to prepare for his bout with Tuffy Griffith at the Chicago Stadium on Wednesday.

He boxed one round each with Tom Jones and Art Malay, and then signed them to act as sparring partners for the next several days. He showed his punch when he knocked down Malay.

Schaaf's daily schedule until Tuesday will consist of road work in Lincoln park and boxing. He plans to box four rounds today.

A change has been made in the supporting card. Salvatore Ruggirello has been signed to replace Henry Lesser in the match against John Kilonske. Ruggirello has boxed here four times, winning twice on a knockout, once on a decision, and losing a decision to Les Kennedy. He beat Tom Mueller in 10 rounds and stopped Jack Teague in three, and Pete Wistort in one.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR WAKE: In its time, Pottgeiser's beer vault in the middle of the block on the east side of State street, south of Harrison, was a place of "atmosphere," as I believe it is now called.

It was there that Moritz Wasserman introduced the Prince Albert suit when he sang "Die Wacht am Rhine." The stage was of the usual dimensions with the orchestra in a pit. On Saturday nights, Moritz entertained the stockyards clientele with the "Connaught Man's Rambles" and the "Battle of the Boyne Water." These lyrics often started free-for-alls.

Black Jack Yattaw was floor manager. To argue with a waiter who short changed you was to invite a hospital stay.

Maggie Cline also achieved fame at Pottgeiser's by singing "Throw Him Down, McCloskey; You Can Do It If You Try." Encore followed encore on Saturday nights.

Pat Sanders was alderman of the First ward and Pottgeiser was a neighbor and precinct captain. Police protection was necessary, and four 200 pound huskies from the Harrison street station were there on crowded nights to aid Yattaw in keeping order.

In three cushions, Hoppe has totalled 171 points to Cochran's 133 in 163 innings.

BRAVES CONQUER PIRATES, 6-2, BUT LOSE SECOND, 4-1

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—The Braves and Pirates split a double header here today, Boston winning the first game, 6 to 2, and Pittsburgh the second, 4 to 1.

Ed Brandt had the Pirates completely at his mercy in the opener, while Heinie Meing was equally effective for Pittsburgh in the second contest. Rabbit Maranville got five straight singles in the first. Scores:

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Quick thinking and fast running by Chick Hafey, Cardinal outfielder, enabled St. Louis to score a ninth inning victory over the New York Giants today, 4 to 3.

The score was tied at 2-all and two were out when Hafey singled to left off Berly. When Pepper Martin also singled Hafey started with the crack of the bat and scored from first with the winning run. Mel Ott of the Giants was removed to a hospital after being hit by one of Grimes' fast balls in the fifth. There is no fracture, but Ott will be out of uniform for several days. Score:

Hallahan Wild in Game; Mild Off Diamond

Never misses a fight when he can get Manager Street's permission to travel a few hundred miles to see one and keeps up on all the fine points of the fight racket, if there are any fine points in the fight racket.

Until last winter Hallahan spent the off seasons working in a typewriter factory in Binghamton. But last year he found something softer.

"I certainly had a swell job last winter and I hope I get it again this winter," Bill said in discussing his post-season plans. "A big bakery in Binghamton asked me to work for it, but I told them I wasn't much of a talker and didn't know much about bread and cakes. They hired me anyhow.

"All I had to do was go around with the regular salesmen and they would introduce me as a pal who had shut out the Athletics. Then I would answer questions from the boss while the salesman took orders from the clerks."

Now That Lefty Grove Is City Broken, He's Really Great

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 18.—Our subject is as long, and tough, and wide, and thick as six feet six of lynching rope.

Our subject smokes a special brand of mail order cigar, the size of a fungo bat, made out of oolong and weeds, in a wrapper of oak leaves cured in tar. It ought to be illegal for a man to smoke such cigars in time of peace.

Our subject's name is Robert Moses Grove. The ball players call him Bob, his neighbors back in the Maryland hills call him Mose and, because he throws left handed, the papers and the customers sometimes call him Lefty. There is no great ingenuity in these names. But there is seldom much ingenuity behind the names that people call other people. A fellow named Edward is called Ed, Joseph becomes Joe. Still, it would be confusing to call a fellow Otto if his name were Henry.

Connie Mack paid $100,600 for our subject back in 1925. This was well over $500 a pound on the hoof. So if Moses Grove permits himself a mild sneer at the prize head in the stock ring in the annual Tri-County fair down home, you will understand that he has a right to feel a trifle patronizing toward the prize head.

He's a Great Pitcher—Connie Mack Says So.

Connie Mack says Mose is one of the greatest pitchers he ever saw, with his record of 16 consecutive victories this season, broken only when the Athletics suffered their first shutout late in August in St. Louis. Still that beating wasn't our subject's fault. He couldn't win when they gave him no runs.

Connie took many a long, solemn sight at Mose Grove before he bought him from Jack Dunn of the Baltimore Orioles for $100,600. He used to sneak over to Newark or Jersey City or down to Baltimore on Sundays and gaze at Mose. Often when he was close to making up his mind, Mose would start heaving them over the grand stand, for Mose in those days had only one central, primitive idea in pitching. His idea was to outswift the hitters. But sometimes a hitter would swing so late that he would bust the next one swinging at the last one. This would irritate Mose, and when he was irritated he would lose his sense of direction.

On such occasions, old Connie Mack would twist his cap back onto his fountain pen, replace his check book, and start away in haste with Old Jack Dunn tagging after him wheedling in his high, whiney voice, "Now wait, Connie; that boy will improve."

During his last years on earth, Dunn was running a major league team in minor league surroundings. He won so many pennants that the customers in the International would let go a little bored cheer on opening day, "Hooray, the Orioles win another pennant," and forget all about baseball until next opening day. So Dunn found a customer in Connie Mack and sent him Max Bishop, Joe Boley, George Earnshaw, and Grove, all members of the present champion Athletics. His club was too good.

How They Called 'Em When They Couldn't See 'Em.

Jack Dunn's son, young Jack, first discovered Mose. Out driving one Sunday in 1920, he heard sounds of consternation from behind a fence in Martinsburg and peeked around to discover a gawky young plough hand throwing a fuzzy baseball past the hitters.

Big Shot McGowan, the American league umpire, a busher himself then, was guessing balls and strikes in that particular game.

"He used to force in a few runs every game with bases on balls," says McGowan. "An umpire couldn't see the ball, so we had a scheme. If the catcher caught the ball, it was a strike. If the ball disappeared, it was a ball. He would throw away several bushels of balls in an average game."

Mose liked young Jack Dunn, but he was old Jack's slave. When the other side would mock old Jack's whiney voice to annoy him, Mose would bear down to strike them out and, often, in this way, would lose old Jack's ball game for him.

When Connie Mack finally took the big chance at $100,600, Mose formed a similar attachment to him, but Connie set to work to sort him out. He had a hard time explaining to Mose that he would last longer if he took it easy. He had walked more than 100 hitters a year in his five years with the Orioles and he started out the same way with the Athletics.

The major league hitters were a shrewd lot. They not only hit his swift, to his great surprise and sorrow, but they got footsore walking around the paths as Mose flung the baseball hither and also thither. A hitter didn't have to hit; he could wait and walk.

Mose wasn't much good in 1925 and it wasn't until the season of 1929 when the A's won their first pennant that he learned to practice deception on the boys, varying his swift with something curly and not so swift. That year he also learned to laugh off his lickings, which was a big help to the ball club socially because up to then Whenever Mose was beaten he was a scowling menace to human life until he won again.

He is a city fellow now, familiar with a lot of big towns that were only hearsay to him down in the hills of Maryland eleven years ago and conscious that if he were only half as good as he is he would still be better than most of the pitchers in the major leagues.

The O'Doul-Herman combination dissolved the deadlock in the fifth inning. Frederick filed to Cuyler, whereupon O'Doul lined a double to left center. He barely had time to catch his breath before Babe singled over short, scoring him. D. Taylor had to stage a better than ordinary catch of a deep fly by Bissonette to keep the inning from being more costly.

The double play ball raised havoc with the Cubs in two innings. In the sixth D. Taylor started off with a walk, but was removed with Grimm on the latter's roller to short. Cuyler grounded into the same trap in the seventh, after W. Herman had scratched a single to Finn. Some of this bad luck was atoned for in the Robins' eighth, which Bissonette opened with a triple to right. He stayed on third while English was throwing out Wright, but tried to score on Finn's bounder to the same spot. English whipped the ball to the plate to catch Bissonette.

Another Cub possibility arose in the eighth. Bell, the first man up, bounced a single beyond Mungo's reach, but Barton tapped into a force out. D. Taylor fanned and Wright staggered back into short left to take Grimm's popup.

Break in Macks' World's Series Lineup Likely

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Baseball observers have heard that the first break in the world series lineup of the champion Philadelphia Athletics may be the substitution of Dibrell Williams, young shortstop, for the veteran Joe Boley.

Connie Mack's lineup has been intact for two world's series triumphs, against the Cubs in 1929 and Cardinals in 1930, but a succession of injuries to regulars this season has brought about the prospect of changes for the next big battle, starting Oct. 1 in St. Louis.

Boley has been out with a charley horse. Even if Boley, because of his experience, gets the call for the opening game, observers feel certain Williams will receive a baptism of world's series combat.

All the other ailing regulars likely will be at their posts for the world's series opener, with the possible exception of George [Mule] Haas, who fractured a wrist some time ago.

GLASGOW, HOLMER LEAD CARDS IN PULLMAN GAME

The Chicago Cardinals will open their home schedule tomorrow with a practice game at Normal park against the Pullman Panthers. Willis Glasgow and Walter Holmer, making their debut as Cardinals, are expected to provide the scoring punch against the Pullman eleven.

Kassell and Rogge will perform at end, while Kiesling and Diehl, guards; Tinsley, tackle; and Erickson, center, will be in the starting lineup. Either Cobb or Gordon will start at right tackle.

smokes anything but cigars, so again it is impossible to say whether John L. Sullivan fought better than Rudy Vallee sings.

Mr. Mack seemed determined to give the Sox a special struggle with his substitutes, but they met his challenge calmly and there was only one moment, early in the game, when they were in any danger of winning. That was when Billy Sullivan Jr. popped a home run over the right field wall for their only run. Although the ball crossed the wall at least 50 feet inside the white stripe, the betting contingent who had taken a long price on the White Sox to lose set up a yell of "foul, foul."

Dineen Foils Gamblers.

But Bill Dineen, the umpire behind the plate, was on the play and he fearlessly called the hit fair. The betting contingent was then thrown out on his ear. The White Sox, like Twenty Grand on the track, have shown their class so consistently that their supporters, like those of Twenty Grand, are beginning to back away. But notwithstanding a price of one to eighty, a syndicate of daring operators was reported to have raised a pool of $3.35, which was bet on today's contest.

To preserve the fair name of the national game from the smirch of suspicion and teach the gambling element a costly lesson, Mr. Mack kept most of his championship club on the bench today and though his club won in the end, it will have to be admitted he put his worst foot forward in the contest with the champion losers of the league.

Foil Kidnap Plot.

The swift, downward climb of the miracle team naturally has called for special precautions to prevent the foul breath of scandal from gnawing at the escutcheon on the national pastime. There have been bold rumors that Max [Boo Boo] Hoff, the celebrated sinister character of Philadelphia, through his agents, has been trying to kidnap one young man in the White Sox infield and hold him until the season is over to protect a big bet on the Red Sox to finish eighth. This young man has been a tower of weakness on the present trip and detectives have been assigned to guard him and keep intact the great infield combination which has established a modern record for two base errors.

WILDCAT VARSITY MEETS FROSH IN TEST GAME TODAY

Veteran Eleven to Start at Dyche Stadium.

Just how far Northwestern's football team has progressed during the first week of practice will be determined today when Coach Dick Hanley pits his varsity candidates against the freshmen in a regular game. The contest will start at 3 o'clock. Coach Hanley changed his mind about making the game a secret affair and will open the gates of Dyche stadium to the public.

Yesterday's two drills were light in comparison to the pace set during the first part of the week. Coach Hanley confined the workouts to lengthy chalk talks in which he handed out a number of new plays. The blackboard confabs were followed by long signal drills in which the boys familiarized themselves with the new formations. The morning practice was brief, since a large part of the squad took time off to register for classes which start Monday.

Russell Rejoins Squad.

Reb Russell showed up at practice yesterday still somewhat shaky on his feet due to the effects of a slight sunstroke suffered in the heated practice on Wednesday. He is expected to take his place in the lineup against the freshmen today.

Coach Hanley will start his regulars but expects to give every member of the squad a chance to perform before the afternoon is over. Today's starters will include Rentner and Moore, half backs; Lewis, quarter back; Russell, full back; Fencl and Eylar, ends; Marvil and J. Riley, tackles; Evans and Dilley, guards, and Weldin, center

This lineup includes all players with previous squad experience, five of whom were regulars on last year's co-championship eleven. Several highly regarded sophomores will get a chance to show what they can do.

Nighthawks Delay Annual Southern Trip

BY BOB RECKER.

The recent hot weather has so upset the migration schedule of at least one flock of nighthawks in Chicagoland that it has forgotten the date it should leave for the gulf. At least, this is our impression of what has happened after watching a flock near our home.

Instead of moving southward leisurely, traveling and feeding on the wing for a few miles each day, the birds have been staying near our home for nearly a week, lured into a lazy life by hot weather and fine hatches of insects every day.

Dinner on the Wing.

We first noticed the flock of nighthawks about a week ago at 6 o'clock in the evening. We were hiking along the top of the bluff overlooking Lake Michigan when, upon looking out over the lake, we noticed three birds performing their typical jerky, flying motions as they picked up a meal of insects from the air. After five had gone past our lookout through the trees we started to count them. The first night we counted 37.

Two nights later the flock appeared about 6:30. We saw them far up the shoreline, apparently coming out of the thick timber where they had roosted during the hot, bright hours of the day.

Four Are Missing.

The second check of the birds revealed a count of 33. Apparently some of the flock had checked out or else our "counter" was wrong. The third night we watched a check showed 36. At least that is the number which went by for a short hunt down the shore line, as their aerial hunting tactics seem to take them up and down the lakefront for about three-quarters of a mile. They fly from 50 to 200 feet above the water.

NEW CONTRACT BIDDING SYSTEM STIRS UP ROW

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The first teachers' convention of the recently promulgated "official" system of contract bridge came to a close today with some ado about Ely Culbertson's "heresy" in the matter of a standardized bidding.

Some of the 16 experts, whose names back up the "official system," were of the opinion that Mr. Culbertson's statement that the system is "80 per cent Culbertson, 12 per cent Milton C. Work and Sidney S. Lenz, and 8 per cent rubbish," really marked his acceptance of it. Only Mr. Lenz considered it a challenge. F. Dudley Courtenay, president of Bridge Headquarters, Inc., was inclined to be jubilant about Mr. Culbertson's opinion.

"We don't care if he considers it his system," he said. "The point is he accepts 80 per cent of it and that is a step toward unanimity. That leaves only one of the nation's experts 20 per cent off."

Courtenay announced that the convention will be repeated in Chicago, probably on Oct. 1, 2 and 3.

PURDUE KICKERS TRAIN TO AVOID 1 POINT DEFEATS

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Those points after touchdowns, two of which cost Purdue an undefeated record last season, came in for attention this afternoon when Assistant Coach Frank Carideo spent nearly an hour with Boilermaker kickers.

Jack White and Roy Horstmann, last year's veterans, along with Fred Hecker and Paul Pardonner, sophomore backs, displayed the most accuracy in kicking over the bar.

The afternoon's drill was brought to a close with the first scrimmage of the season. Coach Kizer sent two elevens, composed largely of sophomores, through a short session while his veterans watched from the sidelines.

One of the best looking back field combinations that performed during the afternoon was composed of sophomores, with Emerson Carter and Fred Hecker at half backs, Kurtz at full back, and Peelle at quarter back. The veterans are expected to scrimmage tomorrow.

ZUPPKE SHUNS VETERANS

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—An eleven which included two lettermen—Gil Berry and Cotton Jensen,—drew most of Coach Zuppke's instruction this morning as the University of Illinois six team squad scampered through a long signal practice. The first of the two drills today served as a respite from the hard scrimmage of the previous afternoon.

Casey Straw, who has been considered for center, is being worked now as a back field man. Al Hall, the Champaign full back, proved himself the fastest of the quartet of candidates for that position, when he won a short foot race.

IOWA LINEMEN EXTENDED

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—A short scrimmage concluded University of Iowa's football drill today. Deprived of morning practice because of university registration, Coach Ingwersen administered a stiff workout during the afternoon. Linemen bore the brunt of the drill with two forward combinations used in blocking practice before the scrimmage. Randall Hickman, half back, and Capt. Oliver Sansen, full back, displayed greatest driving power against the second string line.

HARD DRILL FOR BADGERS

Madison, Wis., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Cooler weather today enabled Coach Thistlethwaite to give his Wisconsin squad the two stiffest practice sessions of the week. The drills followed the usual routine, except that dummy scrimmage made its first appearance in the forenoon, while in the afternoon the men got a bit of rough work in running down punts.

Rebholz, McGuire, Strain, and Schneller looked best in the kicking, while Linfor, Ellicker and Bingham made some nice returns. On the whole, the tackling was mediocre.

Because of registration there will be no morning work Saturday. Scrimmage will not be a regular part of the practice sessions until Tuesday or Wednesday.

Stagg Invites Inspection of His Maroons at Drill Today

Open practice for the University of Chicago football team will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon, Coach Stagg decided last night. Alumni and others who want a view of the fortieth Chicago eleven will be given an opportunity to see all the players in scrimmage. This afternoon's workout probably will be the only public practice session of the season.

The scrimmage should give an idea of what the squad has available. The players are in first class condition and the double drills of the week have developed in them a semblance of team play. Stagg's new offensive formation will be shown in the scrimmage.

Stagg Seems Satisfied.

Coach Stagg seems to be satisfied with the progress the team has made and his chief worry is to develop enough men to handle the double header next Saturday. He already has one good line in sight, and plenty of backs, but the reserve linemen are far below the caliber of the first group.

If hard work will produce linemen, however, Chicago should have enough before the week is over, for Assistant Coach Pat Page continues his furious driving. He had the forwards charging and blocking for hours at a time yesterday morning and afternoon.

Temple Escapes Injury.

Joe Temple was reported ready for action by physicians who examined his leg, injured when he fell into an open manhole. The veteran back was told to rest until Monday because some muscles were bruised. Temple should be available for the opening double header. Unless the cause of Mackenzie's ailment is discovered shortly he probably will be of no use this season, for he is unable to run.

NOTRE DAME TO SCRIMMAGE

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—After announcing that tomorrow will bring the season's first scrimmage, Coach Heartly Anderson sent his Notre Dame squad through another intensive drill on fundamentals and signals.

"Our offense," he said, "is in pretty rough shape, and we'll have to work hard to get it polished off by the time the season opens. In fact, we may not have it clicking right by then."

WOLVERINES SCRIMMAGE

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—The men who are most likely to be on the field when Michigan meets Michigan Normal Oct. 3 were given their first scrimmage of the season this afternoon, drilling against fourth string forwards. Play was ragged, although all of last year's line and two veteran backs were used. Capt. Roy Hudson was on the side lines, as it was feared he would suffer another attack of appendicitis.

Coach Kipke had Hewitt and Williamson at end, Auer and Samuels at tackles, Lajeunesse and Hozer at guard, Morrison at center, Newman, quarter; Everhardus and Fay, half backs, and Cox, full back. Morrison later was replaced by Bernard. Ted Petoskey, Estil Tessmer and Wally Miller, men who are expected to make good, nursed bruises on the side lines.

Kipke also picked second and third teams for signal drill. On the second eleven were Daniels and Yost, ends; Cantrill and Chapman, tackles; Kowalik and Douglass, guards; Bernard, center, and Westover, Renner and Bill Heston and Jack Heston in the back field. The third team included Howner and Ellerby, ends; McCrath and Wistert, tackles; Sikkenga and Oehmann, guards; Shick, center, and Holland, Debaker, Stinespring and Hayes in the back field.

OHIO CENTER HURT

Columbus, O., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—Ohio State's football team suffered its first casualty of the season this morning when Pete Delich, center candidate from Gary, Ind., sustained a shoulder injury. Delich will be out for ten days or two weeks. Bert Nasman, last year's reserve center, who is being groomed for an end job, will be called back into the line.

The first team consisted of Ferrall and Gillman, ends; Rosequist and Haubrich, tackles; Varner and Gailus, guards; Smith, center; Cramer, quarter back; Keefe and Holcomb, half backs, and Welever, full back.

On the second group were Conrad and Kirk, ends; Baumgarten and Bell, tackles; Lukz and Kile, guards; Cochran, center; Benis, quarter back; Carroll and Hinchman, half backs, and Vuchinch, full back. Later on, Oliphant and Embrey were given a chance at half back.

GOPHER BACKS VIE

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 18.—[Special.]—As scrimmage becomes part of the daily program the keenest fight in years has developed for the four positions in the Minnesota back field. The hottest scrap is being waged for the quarter back post, with two 150 pounders, MacDougall and Champlin, giving My Ubl and Pete Somers strenuous competition.

The work of MacDougall has stood out this week. Jack Manders, veteran full back, is being forced to shake off a promising sophomore in Lloyd Hribar to keep first call on that job. In the first week's drill Hribar has shown to better advantage.

When and if Quentin Burdick returns to the squad after shaking off an appendicitis operation he may find himself a trifle behind his rivals, Swartz and Griffin. Today's scrimmage was the bitterest of the week, with the reserves giving three teams of regulars all the action they wanted.

Kelly's arm was hurt. Coach Anderson ordered an X-ray immediately but no break or fracture was revealed.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL SALES SEEN IMPROVED

BY O. A. MATHER.

Despite the handicap of continued weakness in commodity prices and unseasonably warm weather, a considerable volume of wholesale merchandising is being done and retail sales are expanding as the autumn season advances. This is the testimony of the weekly trade reviews appearing yesterday.

From other quarters also came news of an upturn in bank clearings, indicating business expansion, and improvement in some lines of construction.

A further recession in the price of several leading commodities has caused additional unsettlement in some industries and again interfered with future commitments," Dun's review says. "Still, a considerable volume of business is being transacted and reports indicate that distribution of merchandise reached fairly large proportions during this week.

Continues to Expand.

"Retail trade at the lower level of prices now prevailing continues to enlarge as the fall season advances. Normal provision for fall, both at wholesale and retail, has not been made and with more active buying in consumers' channels for fall and winter use a steady call for duplicate orders and quick shipment will certainly follow. Less urgency for prompt delivery, however, has been noted this week."

Unseasonable weather as a retarding influence is mentioned by Bradstreet's Review, although it is said that wholesaling and jobbing generally about held their own compared with the preceding week.

"Some reflection of the less than expected activity among retailers was discernible in the wholesale trade," the review continues, "and also a slowing down of the increasing seasonal volume of the last few weeks, but sufficient impetus remains to keep the general level up. Compared with other years, however, orders from retailers are smaller and obviously more for immediate needs."

Bank Clearings Up Sharply.

Bank clearings made a sharp increase this week, being placed at $7,-[illegible],000, which marked a gain of about 50 per cent over last week, which contained Labor Day, and a decline of only 20 per cent from the same week in 1930.

Heavy building construction also made sharp improvement this week. Engineering contracts totaled $42,604,-000, compared with $27,759,000 last week and $65,183,000 a year ago, according to the Engineering News-Record.

Business failures this week were the least numerous for any full week in a number of months. They totaled 404, compared with 497 a year ago, a reduction of 14 per cent. Failures in five days last week totaled 396, being influenced by the Labor day holiday.

Shipping Forecast.

A forecast of business in New England for the last quarter of this year, made by the shippers' advisory board, indicates a decrease of 4.9 per cent from the final quarter of 1930. However, this indicates a slowing down in the rate of decline, as the decrease from January to September was 11 per cent, compared with the corresponding period in 1930.

Business activity last month was below the level established at the beginning of this year, according to the national industrial conference board. Seasonal upturns were observed chiefly in consumer activities but they were less than are experienced in normal years.

See Rail Group Competition Boon to Nation's Markets

BY SCRUTATOR.

One of the salient points in THE TRIBUNE'S railway consolidation plan, published recently, is that it provides for healthy, broad competition between groupings of railways for markets. This competition should not be compared with the so-called competition of parallel lines, where indeed there is none, since rates charged between specified points are the same for all roads.

THE TRIBUNE'S plan, intended as one suggestion in the general discussion of ways to save the railroads from financial ruin, recognizes that free competition has been one of the prime elements in making the United States the greatest of all nations. Competition between railroad groupings for markets means that shippers will get a maximum of service and protection for their interests among other benefits which will accrue to the nation.

Two examples will illustrate this point.

Cites Pig Iron Market.

The market for pig iron along the Atlantic seaboard from New Jersey north previously has absorbed some 1,000,000 tons annually. The greater part of the supply came from the furnaces of Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Ohio, with a lesser though important share coming from Wales and Europe. European pig iron was able to compete in the American market because of the cheap ocean shipping rates.

There came a time when important furnaces in the Birmingham district of the south determined to seek a part of the eastern business denied to them because of high freight rates. They got the southern railroads to give them rates on pig iron to southern ports where the product could be transferred to steamers for shipment along the coast. The combination railroad and ship rates were then sufficiently low to enable the Birmingham furnaces to compete in eastern markets to the extent of getting about 200,000 tons of the 1,000,000 ton market.

Complaint from the North.

Then the northern pig iron producers complained that the southern furnaces were getting rates from the southern roads which did not return these roads a profit and granted a preference to the southern rivals. The northern furnaces insisted that the southern railroad rates be on a level with the northern rates. This, if put in effect, would have again closed the eastern market to the Birmingham furnaces.

The southern roads asserted that they were not preferring anybody, that they had had no part in the establishment of the northern rates and that the business of hauling pig iron to southern ports was profitable to them. They further demonstrated that the southern furnaces had displaced European pig iron rather than that of the northern furnaces. They convinced Examiner Frank C. Weems of the Interstate commerce commission that their position was just and the examiner has recommended that the plea of the northern companies for an advance in rates be denied.

Kept on Their Toes.

Thus we have a southern grouping of railroads moving at right angles with the northern grouping in competition for the pig iron market. This competition will ensure adequate service for the consumers and will keep the northern roads on their toes watching their rates to see that their customers lose no advantages which might enable the Birmingham furnaces to cut further into their business.

The second example comes closer to home. A large part of the writing paper of the country is manufactured in New England. Many direct lines—and in addition many Canadian routings—are available to bring this product to Chicago. However, there is an important writing paper plant in Wisconsin. Consequently to permit New England paper to compete in Chicago the freight rates must not be too high. High rates would give Wisconsin paper, with its lower transportation charges, a decided edge.

Legitimate Competition.

Thus, although there are a multiplicity of lines between New England and Chicago, the rates charged are not governed by rivalry between these roads, leaving out factors of fixed rates and privileges, but by the fact that there is a paper mill in Wisconsin. The eastern roads compete with the Wisconsin market to get Chicago business. Here again is legitimate competition.

Two outside advantages from market competition might also be cited. One is that it facilitates the nation's resources as a whole. Lack of competition might mean the concentration of development of resources in certain localities. The advantages of having widespread sources of necessities in times of national emergency are obvious. It is well to have pig iron always available both in the north and south. The other advantage mentioned happens to apply in the pig iron case. By using combination rail and ship routings we help build up our ocean shipping—another national aim.

BRUNSWICK-BALKE PLANS REDUCTION OF SHARE VALUE TO $25

Stockholders of Brunswick-Balke-Collender company have been notified of a special meeting called for Sept. 28 to vote on the reduction of the book value of the common stock to $25 a share, it was announced yesterday. Present book value of the stock is $48.16 a share. The proposed reduction in the book value is for the purpose of providing capital surplus to permit continuance of dividends on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

The stockholders also will be asked to approve retirement of 3,819 shares of $100 par $7 cumulative preferred stock held in the treasury. The reduction of outstanding preferred to 41,181 shares, and a decrease in the authorized preferred to 41,181 shares from 60,000 shares.

Brunswick-Balke-Collender's corporate surplus at the end of 1930 was $177,341, compared with $5,462,680 at the end of 1928. In the two intervening years operations were at a loss.

"The difference between the present stated capital and the stated capital reduced as above set forth," said R. F. Bensinger, president, "will be set up as a capital surplus out of which it is intended to set up proper reserves for contingencies.

"The directors deem it advisable that dividends upon the preferred stock may be declared and paid from such capital surplus should current earnings or earned surplus of the company not be sufficient for that purpose, at least for so long as the company maintains its present liquid position."

Roads Say Rate Increase Would Give 4.01% Return

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 18.—The granting of a blanket increase of 15 per cent in freight rates to railroads, as has been requested in a petition before the interstate commerce commission, on the basis of traffic for 1931 to date, would give the roads an estimated net return of 4.01 per cent on their investment, it was stated in a general brief filed on behalf of all railroads today.

This brief termed the granting of the petition a "proper course" on the part of the commission, which has set next Monday for the beginning of oral arguments.

The commission already has received, including those filed today, more than 100 briefs, the majority opposing the granting of the increased freight rate.

Suggest Exemption.

One brief was submitted on behalf of 153 short line railroads, which suggested that agricultural products might well be excepted from the rate increase if it is granted, both for the relief of agriculture and because of the fact that agricultural commodities pay less than 10 per cent of all freight revenues.

The brief filed today on behalf of the railroads reviewed post-war operations, including the expenditure of new capital for additions and betterments of service to the extent of more than five billions. This money, the brief stated, was raised "largely through borrowed money on the abiding faith in the fairness of the American people."

"Upon the curtailment of business which set in during the latter part of 1929," the brief stated, "despite cogent reasons for pursuing an opposite course, the carriers decided to continue, as far as possible, a normal program of expenditures. They adhered to this program as long as it could be justified from the standpoint of the trust reposed by the railroad security holders in the managements of the carriers who were administering property which, though devoted to public use, is nevertheless private property.

"During the present year the carriers have met, as far as possible, the exigencies of the present situation by drastic curtailment of capital and operating expenditures. They finally reached the point where they could no longer disregard the fact that their existing rate structure had become inadequate to support their service and their obligations to their investors."

The net railway operating income in 1930 was $568,878,792, this being described as "3.54 per cent of the value of the property ascertained by adding to the aggregate value" established by the commission the net cost of additions and betterments made subsequent to that date.

Freight revenues for the first half of 1931 were said to have been 18 per cent under those of the comparative period in 1930, indicating freight revenues for all of 1931 totaling $3,348,-000,000, compared with freight revenues of $4,082,000,000 in 1930.

Other Revenues Drop.

Passenger revenues, which totaled $729,471,000 in 1930, were said to have declined 23.3 per cent in the first half of 1931; mail returns 5.4 per cent, express 24.2 per cent, and miscellaneous 18.8 per cent.

"If the freight revenue for 1931," the brief continued, "under existing rates arrived at in the manner stated be increased 15 per cent and if there be deducted from the next railway operating income thereby produced the additional taxes which would become applicable, it is found that the net railway operating income would become 985 millions, produced by the net railway operating income under existing rates of 553 million dollars, and the prospective increase in net railway operating income under the proposed rates of 432 million dollars. The return will be 4.01 per cent, as contrasted with the estimate of 3.91 per cent based on the four months' figures available at the time the application was filed."

LONDON MARTS UPSET AGAIN; STERLING TARGET

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Financial nervousness, which it was hoped had been dispelled by the creation of the national government, which completes its fourth week in office Monday, has returned to London and all the markets today passed through an uncomfortable time.

The stock selling movement of the last few days was continued; British funds fell 2 to 3 points, there was a large withdrawal of gold for Holland, and foreign exchanges took an unfavorable trend.

The dollar sterling rate was maintained at a pegged figure and finished at $4.85 15-16, but was subjected to heavy pressure in the afternoon from New York, which presumably means further inroads on the government's French and American credits specially granted to maintain it. Leading foreign exchanges which were not pegged moved sharply against sterling, the Belgian rate falling to 34.86 belgas and the Swiss to 24.88½ francs.

Canadian Dollar Falls.

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The Canadian dollar fell to the lowest level in nearly two years today. In terms of United States dollars, it was quoted as low as 98¼ cents, and ended the day at 98 5-16, off ⅝ cent from yesterday. Today's levels were the lowest since November, 1929, when the Canadian dollar touched 97 cents. The sag in this currency was attributed in banking circles largely to the low price of wheat and Canada's reduced export surplus of that grain.

Sears-Roebuck, Cudahy Co. Vote Regular Dividends

Regular quarterly dividends on common shares were voted yesterday by the directors of Cudahy Packing company and Sears, Roebuck & Co. The Cudahy disbursement is $1 a share. Directors also declared the usual semi-annual dividends on the preferred stocks. Sears directors authorized the usual distribution of 62½c a share.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Division State bank a dividend of 1 per cent, payable Oct. 1, was declared for stockholders of record Sept. 23.

Public Service of N. J. to Offer Preferred Stock

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey announced yesterday that it will make an offering on Oct. 1 of 50,-000 shares of its $5 cumulative preferred stock [no-par value] to its customers and to the public.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 18.—Reports that a group of financiers had warned the British government that the pound is in peril gave nerve worn Wall street an attack of the jitters today. Stocks were sold on the heaviest scale in weeks and practically the whole list broke to new low levels for the bear market.

United States Steel common hit 77¼ on a drop of some 3½ points from last night's close and American Can plunged nearly 5 points to record a new bottom at 82½.

Such issues as Consolidated Gas, Eastman Kodak, Western Union, General Electric, New York Central, and Westinghouse went down anywhere from 2 to 6 points or more under an irresistible flood of liquidation.

Selling from Abroad.

Weakness in seasoned railroad and industrial descriptions formerly held abroad, as well as in foreign bonds, suggested to many observers that much of the selling was originating in European centers. The exchanges at London, Paris and elsewhere in Europe were weak from the outset.

Probably the London cable on the prospects of a possible revaluation of the pound was not the surprise in well informed circles that the market break would seem to indicate at that. Foreign holders of American securities as well as of their own have been succumbing to occasional spasms of fresh pessimism for some weeks now and the local share exchange no doubt has had to absorb considerable selling from abroad.

This may have accounted for some of the sharp dips that have punctuated the steady stream of liquidation recorded by the receding table figures since well back in the summer. This has weakened the technical structure of the list as well as the nerves of the trading element and laid the ground for just such a collapse as that of today.

Foreign Bonds Tumble.

Opening prices were generally lower, but it was not until well along toward midday that the list began its headlong retreat. This gave the foreign bonds time to take their tumble, furnishing all the confirmation that anxious shareholders needed that the worst was about to happen in the financial and political situation abroad.

The share offerings grew in volume and the trading broadened in scope right on from noon to the close of business, final prices in most cases being about the lowest of the day. The turnover exceeded 3,250,000 shares.

Those with holdings to dispose of played no favorites and no one group fared much worse than all the others in the downward sweep. One variation from the rule of other "bad" days of recent date was the acute weakness of the tobacco shares which have heretofore borne up in rather robust fashion. Today the so-called "depression proof" tobaccos took their medicine with the rest, American Tobacco common and the B issue losing each 6¼ points, Reynolds declining 2, and Liggett & Myers 2½ points.

American Telephone Sags.

Most of the share leaders sank to new lows early in the retreat and kept on heading for still lower ground. American Telephone dropped more than 6 points to a brand new low, and Consolidated Gas sold under 50 for the first time since 1928. Some of the more volatile issues did even worse.

Railroad shares as a group receded 1 to 7 points, Atchison, Union Pacific and others touching new bottoms, and oils and coppers found themselves out of favor. Generally inactive preferred stocks found even thinner markets than the recent poor ones.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 18.—C. E. Richardson, formerly vice president of the Chase National bank, has become vice president and treasurer of the Fox Film corporation and a new finance committee headed by W. W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National bank, has been appointed for the film corporation. This was learned today.

Whether the changes signified bankers had obtained a larger interest in the company, which, presumably, is controlled by General Theaters Equipment, Inc., was not disclosed.

Besides Mr. Aldrich members of the new finance committee are George M. Moffett, president of the Corn Products Refining company; Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox Film; E. R. Tinker, president of Interstate Equities corporation, and Mr. Richardson.

General Theaters Equipment took over control of Fox Film in May, 1930, after it passed out of the hands of William Fox.

Although it was reported that arrangements had been made to extend short term obligations of General Theaters Equipment falling due soon, no confirmation could be obtained. Among short term obligations shown in the last balance sheet was one for $10,-000,000 falling due Sept. 27.

HEAVY SELLING FORCES BONDS TO LOWER PRICES

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Heavy liquidation forced the bond market to new low records today. Sales on the stock exchange aggregated $15,602,000, the largest total for a full session this year.

The most striking losses appeared among foreign bonds. United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland 5½s of 1937 hit a new low at 101 and closed 3½ points off, an unusual loss for this issue, on an extraordinarily heavy volume. French 7s of 1949 reached a new bottom at 116¼ on steady selling. Wide losses were scattered among other foreign issues, especially loans of Argentina, Poland, Germany and Australia.

The downward trend appeared among domestic corporate bonds, too, but the losses on the whole were not so large as in the foreign group. The movement was, not concentrated, as has happened frequently heretofore in the more speculative issues. New low prices were recorded by such high grade obligations as American Telephone 4½s of 1939, Atchison general 4s, Pennsylvania Power and light 4½s of 1981, and Western Union 5s of 1960 and of 1961.

Even Liberty and United States treasury loans eased off after early strength, but the volume was not particularly heavy.

Daily News and Hearst Issues Selling Lower

Further reflection of discontinuance of dividends by the Chicago Daily News, Inc., appeared yesterday when securities of the newspaper sagged to new low prices. Chicago brokers reported bids of 42 for a limited amount of the preferred stock, while stock was offered for sale at 45, a drop of 10 points in the asking price overnight.

The common stock of the Daily News was quoted at 6 bid, 7 asked. The 6 per cent debenture bonds were quoted at 84 bid 85½ asked. Earlier this year the preferred sold above 91, the common stock was above 20 and the debentures were near par.

The class A stock of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., which has been in process of public distribution for more than a year at $25 a share, was quoted on the Chicago unlisted market yesterday at 22½ bid, 23½ asked. Brokers said, however, that the bid price was good only for a small amount of stock. The original amount of stock offered to the public and employés was 2,000,000 shares, $25 par value, but considerably less than half of the issue has been sold, according to La Salle street reports.

Interborough Rapid Transit.

Please give me a report on Interborough Rapid Transit company 7 per cent bonds due in 1932.—A. C. B.

Interborough Rapid Transit company operates the municipally owned subway in New York City and operates Manhattan railway, elevated lines, in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx. The subways are leased from the city of New York, but Interborough owns rolling stock and other equipment. The Manhattan railway properties are operated under a 999 year lease at a rental sufficient to pay interest on the Manhattan company bonds, specified dividends on its stocks and for the construction of certain extensions.

On July 15, 1931, the New York state Court of Appeals stated that the New York transit commission had not the authority to grant a higher fare than the 5 cent fare now in effect until the company's contract expired in 1935.

The plan to unify New York transit lines as submitted by Samuel Untermyer, counsel to the transit commission, provides that Interborough 7 per cent secured notes due in 1932 be paid by the city in cash or 4 per cent corporate stock at the city's option. This plan is still under discussion. There is possible early competition from the new west side municipal subway.

Under its contract with the city the company is allowed a return on its investments in the improvement of the subway system after deduction of operating expenses. The city of New York then receives a return on its investment which is cumulative. The company's income is virtually, therefore, its preferential allowance plus net earnings of the elevated railway properties.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1930, total income available for interest charges was $14,448,166, against $14,522,282 for the preceding year and $14,270,833 for the 1928 year. The company's fixed charges totaled $13,676,463, $13,473,097, and $13,778,-565 respectively.

Net after taxes and rights for the twelve months to June 30, 1931, was $13,568,740, against $14,323,569 for the preceding twelve months. Deficit after charges and Manhattan railway dividends was $3,315,934, against $2,155,077 for the twelve months ended June 30, 1930.

The 7 per cent notes due September 1, 1932, are somewhat speculative.

Net income in 1930 was $176,652, or 98 cents per share on 179,882 shares of capital stock, against $266,-229, or $1.48 per share, for 1929.

THE PEOPLES TRUST AND SAVINGS

GLOOM PERVADES LA SALLE STREET AS STOCKS DROP

Insull Issues Decline; Swift Active.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

With professional market tipsters daubing still darker tints on the economic picture, the speculative fraternity worked itself into a characteristic paroxysm of despair yesterday and stock prices came tumbling down again. It was a pretty gloomy day for the tape readers who have now reached about the ultimate in gloominess.

Disconcerting reports about the English situation and the extremely bearish construction placed on domestic trade conditions played a part in the day's events. The seemingly unending stream of liquidation which has been wearing away at values has given rise to vague fears that something is hanging over the market. Brokers' advice to customers was wholeheartedly bearish.

Substantial Liquidation.

The selling on the Chicago exchange was not as persistent as on the big board, but there was a substantial volume of real liquidation. Coupled with the short selling the pressure was sufficient to wipe out practically all trace of yesterday's late rally. No severe breaks occurred in individual issues but all classes of stock were weak.

One of the conspicuous weak spots was in Insull Utility second preferred which slumped 7 points then recovered slightly. Declines in the other Insull shares ranged from 1¼ in Insull common to 2½ in Commonwealth Edison. Middle West was down a fraction on the heavy volume of trading.

Swift Issues Decline.

A sudden spurt in trading in Swift & Co. and Swift International developed and both stocks finished the day moderately lower. The parent concern recently announced a 10 per cent salary slash. U. S. Radio was off 3/4 on moderate trade as the company's president, J. Clarke Coit, announced the addition of four new sets to the firms' line of products.

Talk in the financial district was concerned chiefly with the prospects of further wage readjustments by the key industries and the reports of a possible revaluation of the English pound. In some quarters it is felt that a scaling down of wage in industries which have hitherto avoided such will prove beneficial to business.

Fair Earnings Reported as Ahead of Last Year

Earnings of The Fair so far in the fiscal year have been well ahead of the preceding year, according to D. F. Kelly, president. In the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1931, the company had a net income of $546,275, after all charges, equal after preferred dividends to 72c a share on the 375,000 shares of common stock outstanding.

SHEEP—Western range lambs, $5.00@6.00.
Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 500; hogs, 4,000; sheep, 4,000.

Cutting sheep production in the range country, where it has been steadily increasing for the last ten years, has been the subject of much comment since the demoralizing break in fat lamb prices, but little headway has been made along this line until recently. The first evidence that the western range sheep men actually contemplate such action comes with word that thousands of ewes are being loaded onto trains and headed for markets in the middle west.

Approximately 4,000 to 5,000 are expected at the Chicago market during the coming week. Many of them will go as replacement stock into corn belt flocks. One salesman, who was notified to be on the lookout for 20 double deck carloads of such ewes, is advising customers that a big share of the same will be under 4 years old and of the black face variety. There has been a good demand for solid mouth breeding ewes lately at $3.00@3.50 and 1 to 3 year olds are selling at $4.00@4.60. Selected light yearlings have sold for breeding as high as $6.00 in recent sessions.

Fat Lambs Show Loss.

Fat lambs show $1.00 loss compared with a week ago, but the undertone was healthier yesterday and some salesmen cited strength toward the finish. Most range lambs went for slaughter at $6.25@6.60, while natives in city butchers reached $6.40 and sold to packers at $6.25 mostly. The outlet for feeding lambs has been narrowing lately, and yesterday's sales were 50c under a week ago. Good feeding lambs are selling at $5.25@5.50.

Slightly cooler weather halted the decline in the market for fresh pork yesterday, but this fact had little influence on the hog market, which finished weaker after a slightly higher opening. Medium and weighty hogs comprised an unusually small share of arrivals and ruled steady to 10c lighter, while the bulk of light weights had to go at 5@10c loss in midsession and later.

Hogs weighing under 200 lbs comprised 45 per cent of the day's offerings, which accounts for the weakness in light weights.

Hog Sentiment Bearish.

Sentiment in hogs of late is extremely bearish, brought about, no doubt, by the earlier and bigger movement of spring hogs to market this fall. Leaders in the trade hold out little hope for a substantial recovery until the bulk of the supply of spring pigs has been slaughtered and in storage.

One of the prominent local buyers, who controls the purchases of more than 700,000 hogs a year, makes this comment:

"The low spot of this winter's hog market will probably be reached earlier than in other years. The season is advanced. Farmers are dumping their hogs earlier than usual and packers are averse to storing away pork from hogs costing more than $5.00. The late winter recovery will depend entirely on the success packers meet in moving products that they store away this winter."

December Hogs Bid $5.00.

Light weight hogs for next December delivery were bid $5.00 on the futures market yesterday and heavy grades for that month were offered at $5.00. Mediums for December were offered at $5.50. On the "to arrive" market the highest bid for next Monday's light hogs stopped at $5.50, but there were no sellers at that figure.

The meager supply of 1,000 cattle on the market yesterday was hardly large enough to establish quotations. The clearance was fairly early for Friday and occasional sales indicated a stronger tendency, although salesmen are advising the country that the market is in no condition to handle more than moderate supplies for the next week at least.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 32,000 to 39,000. J. M. Waters marked 39,000, R. Trullinger 37,000, H. E. Turner 36,000 E. S. Waterbury, Southwick, W. G. Olson, R. B. Wills, W. Garret, and H. Wolfe 35,000, F. M. Sherwood and J. T. Brown 34,000, F. Knutzen, H. Pattison, and P. W. Young 32,000,

WHEAT PRICES FEEL EFFECT OF STOCK DECLINE

Traders Are Cautious; Mart Closes Lower.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Weakness in the New York stock market dominated the action of wheat yesterday. While the September delivery again acted tight and sold up to 50¾c, or ⅜c above the finish of the previous day and to a new high since Aug. 15, the deferred deliveries were under pressure and closed around the bottom with net losses of ⅞@1c. December finished at 50¾c, and May at 54¼@54⅝c.

Trade in wheat was unusually quiet and operators were disposed to go slow in making commitments on either side in view of the pronounced weakness which developed in the security markets. However, the action of the latter has not been reflected to any extent in wheat, as the September delivery is holding around the level of prices which prevailed over 30 days ago in the face of a decline of around 30 points in the average price of industrial shares during the same period.

September Wheat Strong.

There was rather persistent buying of September and selling of December and May wheat, the former being ¼@⅜c under the December at the last, the smallest difference of the season. While the visible supply is around 235,000,000 bu the grain is in strong hands and the amount available for delivery on future contracts is small. There was a decline of ¼@⅝c in the basis in the cash market today, however, as milling demand was less active. All contract grades continue to sell at fair premiums over the September in the leading markets.

European demand for North American cash wheat was much less active yesterday, although foreign authorities admit that the United States and Canada have the only supply of choice grain that is available for importers use until the new Argentine and Australian crops are harvested, and the grain from the southern hemisphere will not start in arrive in volume abroad until late in January or early in February.

Liverpool wheat closed ⅜@⅝d lower for the day, although offerings of Danubian grain were reported as being withdrawn. October there finished at 54⅝c. Winnipeg held up better than Chicago and was off ⅝c at the last with October at 52c.

Good rains were reported overnight in parts of central Nebraska, but Kansas remained dry and hot, and seeding of the new winter wheat crop continues to be delayed.

Cash Corn Sales Liberal.

Shipping sales of 221,000 bu cash corn with charters for 400,000 bu to eastern lake ports led to short covering in the September delivery and it closed ⅜c higher at 42⅝c, but the deferred futures were off ⅜c in sympathy with wheat and the stock market. December closed at 38@38¼c, and May at 41⅞@42c, the latter touching 41⅝c on the break, or within ⅛c of the lowest figure of the season.

Bulk of the trade in corn futures was of a local character, with a leading operator a good seller of the December at times. Little attention is being paid to the routine news.

Oats Unchanged.

September oats acted a little tight and closed unchanged at 22⅛c in the face of scattered liquidation in the deferred deliveries. The latter were off ⅝c for the day, December closing at 23⅝c, and May at 26¼c. Commission houses were buyers on the decline.

Rye market was influenced mainly by the action of wheat and closed ⅝@⅞c lower with September and December finishing at 38⅞c, and May at 41⅛c.

COTTON AT NEW LOWS

Cotton prices dropped to new low levels yesterday, the lowest in recent years. Increased pressure from professionals and holders early in the day kept prices on the downgrade and, reaching new lows about lunchtime, with December down to 6.67c in New York. Buying was by trade interests and shorts, with sentiment largely bearish. The close was at net losses on futures in Chicago of 102 points, with other markets off 10@17 points. Spots dropped 15 points to 6.40c in New York, 6.10c in New Orleans, 6.30c in Galveston, and 6.20c in Houston. Liverpool closed unchanged to 1 point net higher, with spot sales 6,000 bales, including 2,000 bales American. Prices follow:

WAGNER BROS. PLAT 12 ACRE SUBDIVISION

Tract Adjoins Chicago Heights.

BY AL CHASE.

Wagner Bros. have just subdivided and put on the market a twelve acre subdivision adjoining Chicago Heights which will contain eighty lots and which will be known as their Greater Halsted Street subdivision. The land, which is the latest unsubdivided property on Halsted street, between Chicago Heights and Glenwood, has been platted into eighty lots. Already six lots at the northeast corner of Halsted street and 197th have been sold to Frank C. Wolgast of Danforth, Ill., who bought them with the coming World's Fair in mind.

The new Wagner Bros. subdivision is on both sides of 197th street, between Halsted street and Glenwood road, in Bloom township. It adjoins Percy Wilson's 300 acre Arterial Hills development. Percy Wagner acquired title at a reported $3,200 an acre. The property formerly was a truck farm. It is half a mile northeast of the new Bloom Township High school, in Chicago Heights, and is served by bus lines to Chicago and by the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, half a mile to the east. The Illinois Central suburban service is a mile and a half to the west.

South State Street Lease.

Louis Foncher has leased the "L" shaped store at 520 South State street from John P. Hooker for the wholesale and retail sale of radios and accessories, for four years and four months at an average annual rental of $5,500. H. R. Jess of Hooker & Slosson was broker.

The Bank's Linen Supply company has leased the one and two story building at 1235-37 North Wells street from N. A. Bergner for a reported term rental of $18,000, through Crowe Bros. & Co.

A. Nason, president of the Nu-Way Shoe Repair company, has leased the store at 20 North Dearborn for five years, through Milton L. Schwartz of the Renting System, Inc.

Buys Wilson Avenue Corner.

Gustav E. Beerly, an attorney, has purchased the building at the southeast corner of Wilson avenue and North Paulina street, lot 92½x165, from John J. Thomas for an undisclosed consideration, subject to a first mortgage of $71,500. The structure contains twenty-two apartments and one shop. Elmer E. Stults of the E. E. Stults Realty company was broker for both parties and will continue to manage the property.

J. William Gartman has leased for ten years the property at 827-31 North Dearborn from J. O. Stoll at a reported term rental of $60,000. The owner, it is stated by Crowe Bros. & Co., brokers in the deal, will spend $20,000 in remodeling the three brick dwellings on the site to contain a Turkish bath, barber shop, restaurant, tailor shop, clubroom, and 108 rooms.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Gray goods sold slowly today. Prices were unchanged although raw cotton opened at slightly lower levels. Some lawns were disposed of at easier prices. The market for fabrics containing acetate rayon is now getting on a steadier basis as mills determine the extent of rebates due to recent yarn price changes. Burlaps quotations were off in Calcutta, and the trade was dull here. Japan raw silk prices were 5c lower on reports of a weak market abroad.
